New obstacles thrown in way of Hatton freeway

By DAVID LELAND

THE PROBLEM-LADEN Hatton Canyon Freeway project may have hit yet another obstacle in its 30-year-plus journey to fruition.

Already burdened by lawsuits, engineering design conflicts, delayed environmental statements and a divided community, the proposed $27 million freeway project's funding may be jeopardized as a result of the Oct. 17 earthquake.

"It (earthquake) could affect the Hatton Canyon Freeway project as it would any other project," said Greg Albright, Caltrans' Hatton Canyon Freeway community involvement coordinator.

State officials have already called a $3 billion federal loan package signed by President Bush insufficient to meet the needs of areas devastated by the Oct. 17 earthquake, which measured 7.1 on the Richter scale.

About $1 billion of that package is slated toward road and bridge repairs.

While the majority of road repair will take place in the San Francisco Bay Area, state road work will also occur closer to home.

North County will see road repair, as will Santa Cruz County, where the replacement of a bridge on Highway 1 in Watsonville is scheduled to take as long as eight to 10 months, according to Caltrans officials.

Albright said that a statewide gasoline tax on next June's ballot could be critical to funding for any number of proposed Caltrans' projects.

"If we don't get a better funding source developed all state programs will be affected," he said, referring to the continued drain on state coffers.

The proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway project, which would begin at Carpenter Street, weave through Hatton Canyon, transition into a complicated interchange at Carmel Valley Road, elevate over Rio Road and end with a new bridge at the Carmel River, currently has state funds set aside for its construction.

But those funds are theoretical if state transportation officials must use that money for providing earthquake repairs to the state's infrastructures.

"Fixing earthquake problems are our (Caltrans) top priority," Albright said. "Some projects ready for advertisement (going to bid) will now be delayed a month or two."

The bottom line, Albright said, is that without a funding boost, Caltrans will need to concentrate on maintaining its existing roads — not building new ones to accommodate rising traffic levels.

"We'll have to focus on what we already have," he said.

Richard Tyler resigns as Sunset director

By NANCY HILLS

RICHARD TYLER, Carmel community and cultural director, has resigned, effective Dec. 28.

In his letter of resignation dated Oct. 23, Tyler did not cite a reason for his decision but simply stated "I shall continue to help and support the city, you (City Administrator Doug Schmitz), and the department in every possible way open to me during the next few months.

"I have enjoyed the many productive and challenging activities during my service with the city."

Schmitz said that the city would probably begin its search for a new cultural director in about a month and Tyler may do some consulting work for the city.

"I'm really sad, personally sad and concerned about the cultural direction this city is going to go now," said city council member Ken White. "We need a top notch, first-class person to replace Richard because he set new standards for the community over the last 12 years. I think we owe him a debt of gratitude. He's put a lot of programs into (Sunset) Center and kept it the cultural center of the peninsula."

Tyler took over the position of Sunset Center community and cultural director in has made an outstanding contribution to the city," cultural commissioner David Benjamin said.

Tyler had a heart attack early this year and since then has often had to take time off.

However, he told The Carmel Pine Cone that stress rather than health was the reason for his resignation. Physically, he is fine, Tyler said.

"I feel I've been very pleased with the challenges given to me and I accomplished what I set out to do," he said. "I hope they will continue with the programming that is so popular and successful."

Tyler named the World Traveler series, the dance program, Lively Arts program and the Festival of Firsts as four of those programs.

Tyler had sent in a letter of resignation in late August, but took it back after he was asked to reconsider by Schmitz.

Though Tyler would make no comment on the conflicts at Sunset Center in the past year, it is common knowledge he is unhappy with recent changes there.

Earlier this year, the director of city administrative services, Greg D'Ambrosio, was placed as the business manager of Sunset Center and as a staff liaison between the Carmel Cultural Commission and Recreation Commission.

Carmel Valley photographer pays tribute to spirit of Kazantzakis

By ANNE PAPINEAU

WILLIAM GILES took so many photographs of his children that they drew him as a cyclops.

And when the earthquake struck on Oct. 17, he was working, appropriately enough, in his darkroom in Carmel Valley Village. Giles was printing from a 21-year-old negative, called "Tower and Cloud," made on the Greek island of Crete.

"Suddenly everything shook, and I said, 'I hear you Kazantzakis,'" says Giles of what he terms "the existential rumble." That photograph will be featured in an exhibit opening Saturday, Nov. 4 in Carmel's Cherry Foundation Gallery. The show is titled "In the Spirit of Nikos Kazantzakis," and pays tribute to the Greek author whom Giles regards as "this century's major religious/spiritual writer."

According to Giles, the author of Zorba the Greek, The Last Temptation of Christ and dozens of other books pursued "a mythic journey," studying the lives of Jesus, Buddha, and the writings of philosophers.

"You see this man struggling with the thoughts of his age," Giles observes. "Then I think he ended up being a humanist. We're all featherless bipeds trying to get by. I think Kazantzakis didn't really make it in terms of enlightenment. For myself, I went from Kazantzakis to Native American teachers and actual Indian teachers — yogis."

Giles own mythic journey has taken him around the globe. But he settled in Carmel Valley, establishing his studio on Delfino Place in the Village and opening the Village Gallery this year.

"One of the reasons I've located in Carmel Valley is it's small enough for the best to get together and get better," he says. As a means to that end, Giles launched "Circle of Light," a series of monthly forums open to all. Another goal is to create The Village Guild, "a group of artists with an interdisciplinary way of looking at things."

Since early childhood, Giles has nurtured an individual view. His mother, a concert pianist, encouraged him to listen for "the notes between the notes."

"I can remember my father putting my toys into a trunk and he took an X-ray of it," Giles recalls of his physician father. "He said, 'If you really look at things, you'll see through them.'"

Boston born, Giles grew up in London, South Africa and Buenos Aires. At age 16, he fled the Peron dictatorship and returned to the United States.

Thus began Giles' "journey of light." He studied photography with the masters, Minor White, W. Eugene Smith and Dorothea Lange. In 1960, he established the first Department of Photography at the University of Rochester, and remained there for 12 years.

During his tenure at the university, Giles discovered the writings of Kazantzakis, and

Swift reaction

Dear Editor:

One aspect of the apparent reaction of the local governments in those nearby cities with earthquake damage which disturbs me is their seeming single response to the severely damaged building problem: tear it down with minimum delay.

We are all aware that such buildings represent a potential hazard to public safety, but they also represent a problem to be solved: safely salvage as much as possible.

Right now there are numerous buildings which could, and I believe should, be used as experiments in different salvage techniques. If it is happening, the media aren't covering it and we are not being told of the results, negative or positive. It is difficult to believe that this nation's brainpower cannot find alternatives to "tear it down."

I have televiewed many hours of the earthquake coverage and not once did I hear a victim say something like "We were advised that the cost to make the building enterable for the removal of contents was prohibitive so we decided against the attempt."

Whether or not local governments will admit it, the business district is the heart of the community. When it is neglected or restricted and particularly when it is severely damaged, the health of the entire community suffers. Repairing the damage is essential but destroying good tissue unnecessarily is criminal.

A merchant who is not given the opportunity to exercise his Return-On-Investment (ROI) judgment may never be able to regenerate his contribution to the health of the community. Local governments which fail to consider the ROI (and resumption of cash flow), are being typically shortsighted and restricting their options.

I believe many merchants, given the salvage of their merchandise, would make astonishing progress to reopen in extended temporary locations if such an opportunity presented itself. In terms of community health, the shorter the trauma the better.

It is amazing to me how much red tape there is when an individual decides to build something and how little there is when government decides to destroy it.

The face of Carmel

Dear Editor:

One of the things I have learned, as I have grown older and wiser, is that we can love/like a person, but still have a different point of view and it's OK. I hope Don Bowen feels the same way.

We have been friendly acquaintances for a long time, but I would like to present a completely opposite point of view of the situation of use permits in Carmel.

Offhand I have a list of six businesses in Carmel now, that were different by previous owners, such as a scent shop on Ocean Avenue to a shoe shop to a sweatshirt shop. Frankly, I thought it changed the space for the worst and would like it to have had the standards first applied.

I also believe there are exceptions to every rule. I believe in the free marketplace, however, every business community I have seen that has failed has not had an identity. There was neither a Saks or a Mervyns, but a combination of both. Therefore you dilute your shoppers because you do not attract particularly either group of people, ergo the "Del Monte crowd" or "The Plaza crowd."

Carmel has always had an artistic aesthetic quality to it and therefore to maintain this, the city attempts to limit the type of businesses and maintain an identity that pleases the upscale shopowner and the "quality of life" residents. I'm in favor of that since nearly 11 years ago this was "the face" that Carmel presented and lured me to.

It is more difficult to be in business here, there are a lot of rules, you don't make as much money, but its a trade-off. Give me a use permit, but along with it charm. Regulate my signs and let me hear the sound of the ocean, etc. etc.

So the exception to the rule is something I'll go along with in order to maintain "the face of Carmel."

One last comment, in deference to Mr. Rubenstein, also a friendly acquaintance, other dress shops are making it and sometimes a look needs to be changed, not a total concept, but a minor shift of gears. And Mr. Bowen, you can't expect a business to sell in the thousands when there is no business to sell, use permit or not. I do agree that very few other businesses could make it at $2,000 a month rent for 700 square feet in a location that does not get heavy traffic, but it's not the use that's the problem.

In summary I want to wish Mr. Bowen continued success, based on his excellent reputation, but let's all make a living without sacrificing the quality of life and therefore "play by the rules."

Equality

Dear Editor:

Every government has its share of poverty. Why? So what can be done to better the quality of life within a nation? What works best to guarantee better living conditions that are beneficial for society as a whole?

Every human being has basic needs; the wish for dignity, safety and well-being. A government must be for the people, and make it possible to afford enough to satisfy ones needs without undue stress. Why else do we elect/need/pay leaders for?

We are humans with higher intelligence and our scientists, political/religious leaders supposed to be the most intelligent/fair; ruling well for all people 100 percent. How many nations leaders are bankers, than leader for a more equal existence? The civilized world has too many unfair situations that deprive people far too much unnecessarily, from enjoying a satisfying existence. How and what system of a government is proven to be better than others? Why and why not?

Aggression develops with inadequate input and lack of necessary teachings. The Hindus have the "Baghvagagita," the Buddhists the "eight-fold path," the "noble truth," and the Christians the "10 commandments"; these words of wisdom are enough, genuine treasures handed down for a better existence, law and order that must be understood, so that the young can contribute more meaningfully. Far too much is overlooked in ignorance and too much power. Think again, before you believe in your own way, and how you control yourself to what is right, and how much you contribute to the marvelous world of miracles that you can create and are a guest in.

Pine Cone recommendations

ENDORsing CANDIDATES and ballot measures is a tricky proposition at best, fraught with pitfalls and second guessing.

In the past the Carmel Pine Cone only reluctantly endorsed candidates in various elections and usually only in elections with significant issues or candidates that would have an effect on the future of the Carmel area. Who were we to tell people how to vote? It sometimes appeared presumptuous and self-serving.

But there are three items on the ballot Nov. 7 that will directly affect Carmel area residents and are significant enough for us to take a position: the Carmel Unified School District board, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board, and Measure B, an ordinance that would raise the sales tax countywide by one-half cent to pay primarily for road improvements, public transit, libraries, mental health care, and the troubled Natividad Medical Center in Salinas.

The first election has featured a quiet campaign, with one incumbent and three challengers vying for two seats on the CUSD board. The Carmel school district has been relatively quiet and has been running smoothly ever since the divisive recall election of several years ago.

Although the CUSD ship has appeared to have sprung a few financial leaks in the past year — especially since the "defeat" of the parcel tax last year — it doesn't appear ready to sink, just list a little. The district and teachers have even reached a contract agreement that takes into consideration the district's precarious financial position, something that is a credit to both teachers and administration.

With that in mind The Carmel Pine Cone recommends that incumbent Patricia Herro be retained to continue her excellent work and that she be joined on the board by Frank Pinney, who has been a strong supporter and participant in school activities in Big Sur, an area that sometimes gets overlooked in people's minds when CUSD is mentioned, but which is an important and integral part of the district. It's time that that community be represented on the board. Although all three challengers (the others are realtor Pam Spagna and teacher and speech pathologist Michael Shouff), appear suitably qualified for a seat on the board, Pinney appears to have the most extensive experience in school affairs.

THE PENINSULA water board features a total of 11 — count 'em — 11 candidates for two seats, with only one incumbent, Billy DeBerry, running.

This is a tough election and there will be tough choices for voters once they close the curtain on the voting booth.

The water board is perhaps the most scrutinized, analyzed and criticized political body on the Monterey Peninsula. It may also be the most difficult political position on the peninsula in terms of complex issues, political pressure and stress — it's not an easy job, but somebody's got to do it, and it appears that 11 people are willing to put their mind, body and spirit on the line for the rest of us.

One who has been doing that since he was elected to the board in November 1985 (he was appointed to fill a vacancy in August 1984), is Billy DeBerry. He has served two years as vice-chairman and is currently chairman of the Administrative Committee. While DeBerry has been linked unfairly by opponents to controversial outgoing chairman Nick Lombardo, he's his own man. DeBerry has proved himself to be fair, competent and willing to listen to both sides of an issue. At a time when the water board is buffeted on all sides by various factions, it needs a board member who has and will continue to stand firm. Thus we recommend Billy F. DeBerry retain his seat on the water board.

The other seat is a bit more difficult, there are a handful of good candidates, but there are two excellent choices: Dale Hekhuis, a businessman and conservationist, and Bob Russell, a PG High School history teacher and former PG City Councilman.

Both would make excellent water board members because they have already shown their commitment and dedication to the Monterey Peninsula and its welfare. But if we have to pick one (and we do), our choice would be Dale Hekhuis. He has shown himself to be an articulate and non-judgmental spokesman for his "side" on various issues on the peninsula. His "side" is one that puts the environment and health and welfare of the peninsula's residents above all, and that balance is needed on a board that has been criticized in many quarters for giving the "other side" short shrift.

Hekhuis has, as he himself says, "paid his dues" and deserves a seat on the board. We recommend Dale Hekhuis to a seat on the water board.

One other issue affecting Carmel — even though it is a countywide issue — is Measure B, the half-cent sales tax hike.

A lot of things have been said and written in the past year about this measure, which would provide $355 million over the 20-year life of the bill by increasing the sales tax from 6 cents to 6.5 cents, a seemingly small increase compared to the benefits it would engender.

A lot has been said about the tax only benefitting the so-called Prunedale Bypass and Natividad, but look at the fine print. Also benefitting will be Carmel Valley Road to the tune of $25 million; improvements to Holman Highway to Community Hospital; peninsula libraries, including Carmel and Carmel Valley by almost $10 million; countywide mental health care; and Monterey Salinas Transit by $20 million.

The tax will be used solely for projects listed by the county board of supervisors. If more money is raised, or other funds become available, then the voter will decide how the money will be spent. This is an opportunity to not only maintain and improve our roads and public transit, but maintain and improve health care and libraries.

The Carmel Pine Cone recommends a yes vote on Measure B for the future of our community. It's a small price to pay.

I HAVE been active for the past 26 years on the Monterey Peninsula as a property manager, builder, and real estate broker.

Currently president of a homeowners association, I have been an officer of local charitable and business organizations.

In seeking election to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board, my position is very clear. I wish to see that a dam is built on Carmel River. I believe that past boards, as well as the current one, have been lax in concentrating on dam development. Too many other avenues have been explored and studied to the detriment of dam finalization. Today the board is now in the semi-final phase of getting dam approval and the push should be accelerated.

Interim water supply projects such as desalination, reclamation, recharge, and low-flow fixture retrofit must be carefully considered and quickly implemented, if feasible. But only a dam will satisfy the long-term water needs of the Monterey Peninsula.

The use of reclaimed water should be mandatory for all golf courses, parks and grounds around government buildings.

The construction of the Canada-Segundo Reservoir should be pursued as it is needed for drought reserve.

Present storage facilities should be scheduled for dredging to give us a larger reserve after the coming rainy season.

We must also slow development — not stop growth, but slow it down until we have the water resources we need.

MONTEREY PENINSULA residents harbor no illusions about the need for long-term water storage.

By an overwhelming ratio in a record-turnout election in 1987, the people voted for a dam. Why was this? Because residents know there is no shortage of water on the peninsula — only a shortage of places to store it.

The public's will cannot have been stated more clearly than it was during the dam referendum. It is the job of elected officials to do what the public wants them to do: I re-

Carmel in '50s: residents fear 'LAization'

By SUSAN BECK

THE CITY of Carmel was overextended, overbuilt, and overly crowded with people not in sympathy with the community according to most of the city's residents just after World War II. Many feared the place would turn into another Los Angeles during the '50s.

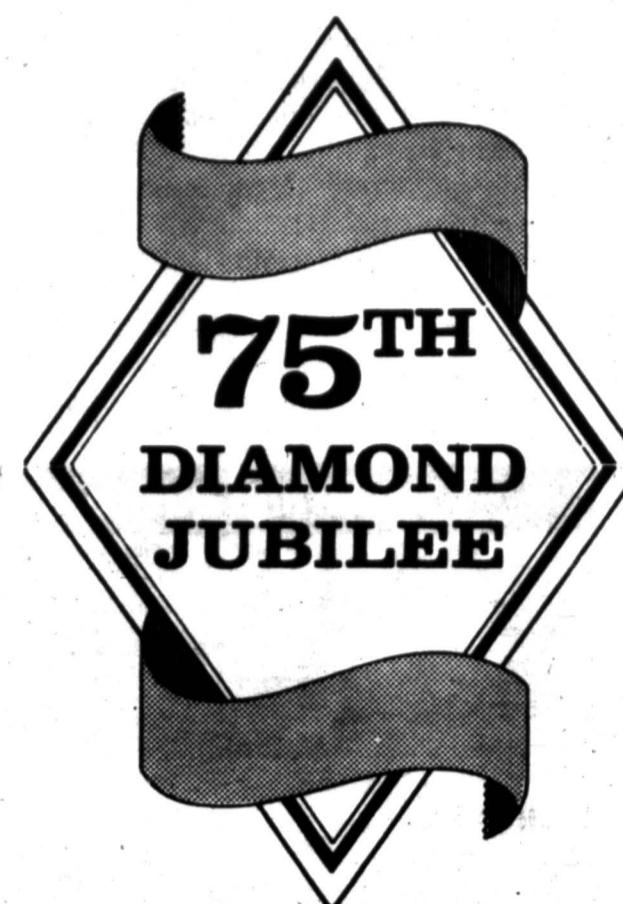

"Carmel is different and should stay that way," said Mayor Horace Lyon.

At a time when a home of distinction with three bedrooms, two baths, recreation room, two-car garage on a corner view lot was selling for $45,000, and a secluded four-room cottage with a glorious view in Big Sur rented for $45 per month, no pets or children of course, local residents began to protect and preserve their beautiful city by the sea from undesirable fringe development.

If Carmel is to remain a city within a forest, said Commissioner Ernest Leffingwell, trees must be planted in every available place on city property and private property. Larry Livingston, Jr., was hired as a planning consultant to draw up a master plan. The plan prepared the city for the next 25 years. The basic concepts were to keep Carmel a residential community with businesses to service the local residents. Carmel should not spread into the surrounding communities, and for this protection the city would be surrounded by a "greenbelt" area.

Isolationism was becoming the dominant theme within the community, and in 1956 a citizen's committee recommended closing Ocean Avenue to traffic and discontinuing additional parking at the beach for tourists because catering to tourists was desirable and necessary but should be considered secondary to Carmel's residential character.

Not everyone agreed. "Abroad people walk on the sidewalks, not in the street," said the owner of the Mediterranean Market, Joseph Bileci. "It is the same here. Eliminate parking, not traffic. People like to drive along Ocean to the beach. That's part of every tourist's Carmel trip. Don't take the privilege away. Let them drive on Ocean Avenue, but arrange for parking elsewhere."

Arranging for people to park elsewhere developed into a top priority project for the city's officials. Resident J.O. Handley said that Carmel's business section was so limited and the land so valuable that the council should get off the dime and buy some parking lots.

"Business people park their cars in the residential district and walk down town, and the residents don't have a place to park their cars in front of their own homes," he opined.

And so they did. The city council bought the parking lot directly across from the Carmel Post Office for $45,000 and the Murphy lumberyard property on Ocean Avenue, east of the Carmel Theatre, for $117,000. In its zeal to provide adequate public parking the city planned to "contribute" its lot next to city hall for additional spaces.

Councilwoman Geraldine Smith commented: "We haven't any right to give away the people's property. In years to come that property might become very valuable, and it could never be used for anything but a parking lot." She recommended finding a way to protect the city if it wanted the lot back.

Along with finding places to park came the problem of regulating the amount of time a resident or tourist could use the space. The consensus was that nobody wanted parking meters, so the Carmel Business Association recommended a one-hour parking limit throughout the heart of the business district, which extended out 26 blocks. The association thought that one-hour parking would give a much greater turnover rate in parking spaces, but still leave plenty of two-hour spaces within easy walking distance of all parts of the business area.

music lovers listened to Isaac Stern, who returned to Carmel after 10 years to play a "stimulating and well-balanced program" at a Carmel Music Society concert.

Political advocates may have listened to United States Sen. Richard Nixon, who was the principal speaker for the Monterey County Republican Preparedness Dinner at the Exhibition Hall in the Monterey Fairgrounds.

"It is not enough that we damn the Democrats, praise the Republicans, predict victory in November," Nixon told the crowd. "That is not good enough for the American people. It is important that we select the right candidates..."

Convinced that the great mission of the Republican Party was to support men in public life who could bring back the confidence of the government he said, "Actually, the test of a free people is their ability to select representatives who know right from wrong."

RIGHT OR wrong, few visitors would have sought out the less well-known, but definitely accomplished women of Carmel who resided here.

Marilyn Grover was the third woman in the United States (possibly the world), to earn a helicopter rating. It is thought that she was also the first woman to fly commercially to Alaska from the U.S., but she gave up flying because of the prevailing attitude: It just doesn't seem proper for a woman to fly.

Lydia Weld was the first woman ever to graduate from a school of engineering in the country. True to the times she said, "I'm not the aggressive type. I might have gotten farther if I had been. My work was just a hobby, a way of occupying time."

Weld may not have been aggressive, but the students at Carmel High School were. The school's principal, Warren Edwards, said that the students achievement tests were incredible. The seniors more than doubled the improvement expected in science background, interpretation of science, literature and vocabulary, and exceeded growth expectancy in social studies which placed them in the top 5 percent of the nation.

The '50s were complex. While the students of the time were making great strides in the sciences they were still shouldering the social graces of the past.

Carmel in the '50s

Everyone in Carmel who was more than 10 years old had to be clothed "from shoulder to knee," according to an ordinance prepared by the city council. Apparently, men in shorts were embarrassing to innocent hometown girls, disgusting to diners in restaurants and undignified.

Mayor Horace Lyon trumpeted, "It's all right to be half naked on the beach," and Councilman Francis Whitaker cited the time that a man in nothing but shorts walked into a Carmel place of business and stood at the counter. He could see the man was wearing shorts, but the girl behind the counter could not. "The office girl, a nice hometown girl...was terribly embarrassed. She blushed," recounted Whitaker.

While the hometown girls were blushing, all hell was breaking loose.

Local real estate firms boycotted the influx of unchaperoned juveniles of high school and college age into the area during the Easter holiday event called "Hell Week." They refused reservations from students who were part of the "sleeping bag" crowd because they thought the students were too destructive.

LOCAL RESIDENTS also thought that the "unapproved plan" for a two-lane divided freeway and overpass at the Pacific Grove turnoff at the top of the hill on the Monterey-Carmel Highway would be destructive.

"It's no use pretending that there won't be ugly cuts and stripping, nobody is going to like it," said a member of the state chamber of commerce statewide highway committee. Progress was impossible to evade, but he said that new pines would be planted immediately after the grading was finished, and within two years the planting would mask the scars.

To ensure against future "scars," Sen. Fred Farr, father of current Assemblyman Sam Farr, asked Gov. Edmund Brown to keep the more scenic of California's state roads from being developed as through traffic arteries, especially Highway 1 south of Carmel. Farr's proposed legislation standards would be established for routes that would qualify for protection as "California Scenic Highways."

Sen. Farr also sponsored a bill for the district that would prohibit billboards within 500 feet of any freeway, or any highway designated by the county as scenic, and the Carmel Highlands Association unanimously went on record in opposing the rezoning of property at Garrapata Creek for construction of a restaurant and bar by Steve Patterson on property which he owned south of the creek on the ocean side of the highway.

David Fink said, "Destruction of the scenic beauty of the coast with a restaurant-bar would ruin the established economic asset of the whole Monterey Peninsula which brings tourists to the whole community," warned David Fink. "It should not be ruined for an individual. Visual beauty should not be sacrificed to dollars and cents."

John Zellhoefer thought it "realistic" to allow commercial establishments along the highway because it was "a positive attitude towards progress. Down the coast is the only way that the Monterey Peninsula can expand."

The peninsula did expand. When the Lobos League learned that preparation were being made to start lumbering operations in the Little Sur area, they urged the quick acquisition of the land for a state park. Sen. Farr had to introduce a bill for a special appropriation because the only available funds were already set aside for the purchase of the Salinas River Beach, Del Monte Beach, and lands to enlarge Big Sur State Park.

Carmel also prepared to buy additional beach land comprising a 600-foot long strip, extending south from Santa Lucia Avenue to the Walker House, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, and the New Year's gift of 1959 to Carmel was about half a block of one of the city's own streets from the state of California. The strip of Ocean Avenue from Carpenter Street to Highway 1 was the shortest state highway in California. The enabling act for the San Simeon Highway specified that the road start from the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. This required the take-over of upper Ocean Avenue from Carpenter to the city limits, a distance of about 180 feet.

On Jan. 1, 1960 the new 65-mile speed limit for automobiles became effective.

The '50s was a decade of preparedness for the residents in and around Carmel, but despite the efforts to plan, protect, and preserve, the previous 10 years did not prepare anyone for the fast pace of the '60s.

The two commissions had conflicts over what programs should be controlled by the commissions.

Behind the scenes, rumors were flying that the cultural commission would be merged with the recreation commission, a move advocates of the cultural commission felt would degrade and detract from cultural programs.

Since that conflict, three cultural commissioners have resigned and were replaced.

The "new" cultural commission is going forward with future programming plans and plans to upgrade Sunset Center.

Accusations that the city council and Carmel was becoming anti-cultural started last year when the city council suspended its financial support of the Festival of Firsts, a playwriting contest. The city contributed $1,000 to the festival this year and private donations, including a $5,000 contribution by Doris Day, allowed it to continue.

The accusations intensified when D'Ambrosio took over the new post and reports circulated that Tyler and Schmitz had personal and philosophical conflicts, a charge Schmitz denies.

"I don't have a 'conflict' with him," he said. "We've been getting along just fine."

Tyler is taking time off until Nov. 6.

Carmel school district-teachers reach pact on one-year contract

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER SIX weeks of collective bargaining, Carmel teachers have agreed to a $234,000, one-year package with the Carmel Unified School District.

While the one-year contract status is typical for the 117 CUSD teachers, the terms of the pact reflect the troubled financial times facing the district.

"It is a complex agreement," confirmed Jim Agan, spokesman for the Association of Carmel Teachers, referring to uncertain state funding targeted for the CUSD.

"Complex" would be putting it mildly—the terms of the deal rival many of the multi-faceted sports contracts put together by high-powered agents.

To begin with, the CUSD is forecasting a budget deficit on paper for the coming year, mostly due to rising health-care costs.

"We've got to work with the district to get a handle on increased health-care costs," Agan said.

That status forced teachers and CUSD officials to be increasingly realistic about what the district's coffers could bear in terms of pay raises.

"We were not in an adversarial position," said CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise, referring to the weeks of labor negotiations between teachers and the CUSD Board of Trustees. "We were trying to problem-solve."

One result of the bargaining: the CUSD picked up a 2.6-percent increase in health, vision and dental coverage dictated by rising insurance premiums.

Infelise said he is currently seeking ways to reduce the $1 million insurance costs to the district, which is currently self-insured in a pool with 50 other districts and three counties.

"We'd like to cut that (figure) down significantly," he said, adding that his office is researching several alternatives. "I'm talking in the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Monetarily, the teachers walked away with a 3-percent increase, or a modest raise of $117,000 in total, which will be added to their salary schedules.

Also, the board allotted a one-time only bonus of an additional 3 percent, or another $117,000.

That means a teacher in his first year with base salary of $20,800, would receive a one-time bonus of $624 to make a '89-'90 salary of $21,424.

At the top of the pay scale, teachers will receive a one-time bonus of $1,102, which will generate an annual salary of $37,831.

Bonus checks will be mailed on Jan. 2, Infelise said.

Infelise said, while the one-time bonus is somewhat unusual, it was mandatory that the district not put the entire $234,000 in its budget because there are insufficient funds.

The one-time money is coming from the CUSD's reserve fund of $1.3 million.

"We have enough money to cover deficits for the next three or four years," said Infelise, referring to the district's solvency. He did, however, forecast a $100,000 deficit this year.

But that's not all. If through some stroke of luck, expert financial planning or state windfall the district comes out with a surplus this year, the teachers could also benefit.

For every dollar of surplus, the teachers get 60 cents, with a ceiling of $77,000, which will be divided among teachers in the same method as the bonus money.

Agan said he is satisfied with the deal and is looking forward to getting back to the business of teaching.

"We're (teachers) happy to have a contract," he said. "So we can go on with the operation."

CPR classes being offered

CPR SAVES more than 250 lives a day; the more people that know CPR, the more lives that can be saved.

With that in mind the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross offers CPR classes monthly throughout the year.

Classes are held at the Carmel Red Cross house at Eighth and Dolores. Classes include demonstrations and teaching of the Heimlich maneuver. Cost is $15 for the eight-hour class. A certificate will be presented upon completion.

Northern and Central California suffered a devastating, terrifying jolt in the earthquake of October 17th. Lives, homes, offices, freeways—the ground we walk on—were ripped apart.

But even before the shaking stopped, the 10 million people who call this place home put their hands out, joined forces with one another and started putting things back together. In the 13 days since, we've come a long way back.

We'd like to pause for a moment and pay tribute to the countless thousands of people and organizations who have performed so heroically in this time of great need. The Red Cross. The Salvation Army. CalTrans. Firemen and policemen. Doctors, nurses and paramedics. Rescue workers, shelter providers and food distributors. Local, state and government workers and officials. Utility workers, including our own. And all the thousands of ordinary citizens who for a moment, a day, or the rest of their lives, became heroes and heroines. Your courage, selflessness, courtesy, equanimity and generosity have earned the admiration of people the world over.

Most of you are also our customers. We cannot begin to thank you enough for all the assistance you have given us and the patience you have shown. We deeply appreciate your help. In gratitude and admiration, we tip our hats to you.

This time, you gave us the power.

should have been done long ago, but were not.

Without some forethought, the human and real dollar costs will be too high.

Our supreme task is safety from droughts at existing homes and downtowns — the heartbeat of America — in the quickest way possible.

Fast and positive action is urgent so that Sacramento will not gut the water district as planned — without a peninsula vote. Big money investors would then work through the county or state. They would undermine local decisions and our quality of life.

Large sums of money are spent to affect what voters, water board members and top bureaucrats decide. Households and small businesses cannot afford highly paid influence peddlers. The stakes are enormous.

Bob Russell

The water district holds (State of the District Report, May 1989), that a new dam can be completed and in operation in between five to six years. Expert testimony from the state places a reasonable timeline at between 15 to 30 years. We must base our interim water policy on the 15 to 30-year model for the protection of the community as a whole.

Elements of an interim water policy (which will lessen our exposure to drought, but not solve the problem), include:

1. Restricting new hook-ups that intensify demand.
2. Cessation of new annexations.
3. Water salvaging.
4. Water reclamation.
5. Water restrictors rather than a system based upon fines.
6. Amending the rationing program to guarantee residential use a baseline supply.

My background includes:

1. Councilman, City of Pacific Grove (1982-87).
2. Chairman of the Coalition For A Secure Water Supply, which led to the successful advisory vote on the new San Clemente Dam.
3. Co-Chairman of the Residents Water Committee

My candidacy has been endorsed by:

1. Carmel Residents Association.
2. Residents Water Committee.
3. United Neighbors of Pacific Grove.
4. Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club.

I ask for your support.

Ralph Holeton

Our children, Martin and Marcy are 27 year old twins, pursuing careers in San Francisco.

Until recently I worked for Monterey Peninsula Water Management District for seven and a half months as a contract employee with the title of Rationing Program Manager. I believe that I know the problems the residents of the Monterey Peninsula face and have a good insight into the internal workings of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. Rationing water is a temporary stop-gap measure. However, unless we can solve our water storage problem with a dam or reservoir, rationing may become a semi permanent way of life.

I find that local view points on the water situation cover a wide spectrum. On one side we have the no dam, no growth advocates and far on the other side are those who believe in unlimited development, regardless of the availability of water and other resources. I believe that either of these views points are extreme, unrealistic and short sighted.

I believe the most important task the water board should do is to protect the existing way of life and economy of the Monterey Peninsula by providing additional water storage.

What the citizens want most is to pull the community back together and solve our water shortage. We must all work together to achieve this goal.

Bill DeBerry

main 100 percent committed to implementing the public's will, and building a dam.

I have never doubted that long-term shortage facilities are the real answer to our shortage. I have never questioned the public's wisdom on this issue.

I support Sen. Henry Mello's bill, SB729, which will hasten the date on which we can take the next step in the public's approval process for our new dam.

Monterey Peninsula residents have been heroic in their water-conservation efforts. Nevertheless I support continued education programs to foster an enduring consciousness for conservation.

I support the use of modern retrofit equipment to replace outdated water-wasting appliances in buildings that change hands. Recently the State of California joined in, calling for more efficient apparatus in new buildings.

County and have successfully drilled and developed water wells in our area which produce water from several different aquifers. The water production from these wells range from 75 to 500 gallons per minute. I know abundant groundwater exists which can solve our immediate water shortage before a dam is built. We can have 15 percent more water flowing within two years.

We all know the Carmel Valley aquifer is becoming contaminated with nitrates from outdated septic system leach fields. This aquifer is the major water supply for the entire Cal-Am system. Continued contamination must cease before the state and local health authorities are forced by law to curtail our water supply.

The water board is starved for technical input and I intend to force feed it when elected! We need more water now, not down the pipe when promised. We can't flush out our toilets with vague dam promises. Even wimpy little toilets won't flush without water!

I maintain that water and politics don't mix. The district can develop water for our community from groundwater other than the Carmel/Seaside aquifers, and I am eager to apply scientific water technology, unsullied by personal political and economic motives, toward that end.

Dale Hekhuis

up the timetables and clarify costs and benefits.

• Produce water for short-term needs by: Maximizing use of reclaimed water for golf courses and parks; Broader use of water-saving toilets; immediate determination of the practicality of desalination and dam desilting.

• Limit new water connections. I led the petition drive (which obtained 10,000 signatures), for temporary limits on new connections. Yet the current water board majority remains totally opposed to any limits whatsoever.

• Stop "Sweetheart" water deals such as the proposal to give the water board chairman 935 acre-feet of water as a water rights settlement.

• Prohibit overpumping of wells in Carmel Valley and Seaside.

My understanding of water management and my experience in working for residents, the environment and business will improve the effectiveness of the water board in solving our water problems.

Community Participation: Founding Director, Carmel Residents Association; Former Chair, Residents Water Committee; Member, Urban Water Conservation Committee; Former Chair, Ventana Chapter, Sierra Club.

Business Experience: Currently Senior Associate, Wave Hill Associates (business consulting); Vice President, General Electric Capital Corporation; Vice President, Southern California First National Bank.

Changing the water board requires two new directors. I support Bob Russell for the second position.

Half-cent tax hike before voters

THE FATE of several capital improvement programs now rests in the hands of Monterey County voters, coming in the form of Measure B.

If Measure B is adopted by a simple majority in the Nov. 7 election, a half-cent sales tax will be initiated, generating an estimated $355.5 million in extra county revenue during the 20-year life of the bill.

Tied directly to state legislation adopted last summer, the proposed tax measure allows Monterey County Supervisors to present to voters a list of which projects will be funded if the tax is adopted.

Projects include the widening of Carmel Valley Road, construction of the Prunedale-Highway 101 bypass and library funding for the cities of Carmel, Pacific Grove, Monterey and Carmel Valley.

Supervisors agreed this summer that it is imperative that the county pass Measure B in order to keep county roads safe.

And while supervisors may agree that Measure B will be a blessing to the county, Ron Pasquinelli, chairman of the board of the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers Association, disagrees.

He cites, as reasoning, increased taxation by the state in providing earthquake relief.

Pasquinelli claims that it will be too expensive for the ordinary citizen to be taxed additionally by the state and county.

But 1st District Supervisor Marc Del Piero disagrees.

"I think there's a whole lot of people in Monterey County who are concerned about the quality of life we enjoy," he said. "If you think you are interested in the future (of Monterey County) you will vote for the one-half cent sales tax."

DeBerry campaign spending the highest amount

CAMPAIGN FINANCE statements for the water board race put incumbent Billy DeBerry in the lead with expenditures of $26,439 by Oct. 21.

Next in line is candidate Dale Hekhuis with $6,061, followed by Tom May at $2,146, Bob Russell with $1,417, $1,247 for Ralph Holeton and Pat Meharry-Meyer with $1,235.

DeBerry's statement includes over 200 contributions for $100 or less by individuals and major contributions from water board chairman Nick Lombardo, the construction industry including trade unions, the hotel industry and Pebble Beach Co. Lombardo contributed, through his golf courses, over $1,000.

Carmel teacher shares in healing powers of nature

By DAVID LELAND

OFFICIALS AT Stevenson Lower/Middle School got quite a bargain this year when they hired science teacher Garth Gilchrist.

Not only is the 34-year-old environmentalist on the cutting edge of timely issues which he in turn shares his students, but he is also involved with Dr. Karl Menninger, one of the world's foremost authorities in helping disadvantaged children get the most out of life by observing nature.

To that end, Gilchrist has designed a plan to develop a nature education program for emotionally disturbed children at The Villages, Inc. in Topeka, Kan.

"It has been Dr. Karl Menninger's dream of many years to see Villages children involved with nature in a way that improves the quality of their lives and allows the children to serve the planet," Gilchrist said. "Dr. Menninger's vision is children healing and caring for nature, and nature healing and caring for children."

Gilchrist travelled to Kansas in late October and will return for six weeks in order to initiate the program this June.

It seems that even before founding the Villages in 1966, Menninger had a vision of young people learning to observe nature, while at the same time becoming healthy.

"Nature and children, two natural resources served in one act," said Gilchrist, who has a child grew up in the wilds near Seattle, Wash.

Menninger, who many consider the father of American psychiatry, set up the Village so it would closely resemble a biological household. In other words, children would be assigned to a home and live with those houseparents indefinitely.

And while activities such as gardening and animal care have taken place, there has never been a conscious effort to teach children the lay of the land.

Enter Gilchrist.

"The Villages Nature Education Program will...act as a model program, demonstrating nationwide the tremendous healing and character-building value of putting children and nature together," said Gilchrist, who holds an English and education degree from Lewis and Clark University.

Gilchrist's ideas for the 365-acre spread, donated in 1966 by philanthropist W. Clement Stone, include:

- Activities that develop aesthetic and a feeling level of appreciation for trees, animals and plants.
- A grasp of basic important concepts having to do with how nature works, such as ecological principles.
- Reading a story about trees while sitting in the forest.
- Walking to different areas of the land and observing how different kinds of trees grow in different soils, and how the same kind of tree grows differently in different soils.

CLOSER TO HOME, at Stevenson, Gilchrist continues to spread his ecological message to his students.

In fact, the students can even take Gilchrist home with them. All they need to do is go to the library and check out Sharing Nature With Children, a book Gilchrist wrote with Joseph Connell in 1979.

"It's really a classic in the field now," says Gilchrist, referring to the some 400,000 copies in print.

While at school Gilchrist utilizes the idea of storytelling to students, in an effort to spread information in an interesting manner.

He mixes true-to-life stories of people and animals with biological information.

"The purpose of all this is to develop a deep sense of respect for our environment," says Gilchrist, who has also conducted hundreds of workshops for professionals on the environment.

Prior to beginning at Stevenson, Gilchrist taught at Yosemite Institute and at the Education For Life Foundation in Nevada City.

The only problem Gilchrist has with his current position is that he must spend the majority of his time indoors.

"It's a challenge to teach within four walls," says Gilchrist, who leads his students on field trips to local forests, tidepools and mountains. "My classes are a real hands-on program."

Carmel Heritage hosts tour of famous citizens' homes

By NANCY HILLS

ON APRIL 18, 1906, "pioneer photographer Arnold Genthe snapped a photograph of earthquake-devasted San Francisco that would later be hailed as one of the 10 best news photographs of all time.

That picture, along with his other earthquake photographs, was developed at Genthe's home and studio in Carmel — his San Francisco studio was destroyed in the disaster. The earthquake photographs gained the already successful photographer national acclaim.

Genthe's Carmel residence, where he returned to develop his famous shots of San Francisco, still exists and is now the home of artist Gladys Kailber. Built in 1905, it is the oldest of three houses open to the public this Sunday for Carmel Heritage's pre-1906 home and garden tour.

The tour, from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 5 is to raise money for Carmel Heritage's historical survey of Carmel. Tickets are $10 to view the three homes and can be obtained from Carmel Heritage or at any one of the homes on Sunday.

Other homes on the tour are the Seaview Inn at Camino Real Street and 12th Avenue and the Col. Harold Mack home at Carmelo Street and 13th Avenue. The Genthe home is at Camino Real Street and 11th Avenue.

The homes offer a peek at Carmel's almost legendary past, when painters, writers and thespians gathered on the then-uncrowded hills above the ocean in what was still unincorporated Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Genthe was a member of the San Francisco "bohemian" group which included Genthe's friend, writer George Sterling. The avant-garde "bohemians" helped establish the original artists' colony that gave the village its enduring reputation as a haven of the arts.

A renowned photographer during his lifetime and now revered as one of medium's early greats, Genthe photographed the luminaries of his time; from the grace of Isadora Duncan and Pavlova to the determination of Theodore Roosevelt. His portfolio includes presidents William Taft and Woodrow Wilson, actress and friend Sarah Bernhardt, film star Mary Pickford and Billy Burke.

His portraits of Greta Garbo's exquisite beauty, according to his obituary, "helped her win her first American screen assignment."

Genthe was a much sought-after San Francisco society photographer and was also famous for his photographs of San Francisco's turn-of-the-century Chinatown.

He established a relaxed style of portraiture posing of his illustrious clients, leading the way for modern photography.

During the era when he was recording these images, he often would return to his Carmel retreat.

His Carmel home was in the tradition of early Carmel cottages, a simple structure made of local redwood.

"During the early years of the new century Genthe spent much time at his Carmel Bungalow, a big, rambling structure built in rustic style of the materials available locally and boasting a studio room that measured a full 30 by 60 feet. The spacious chamber became a favorite gathering place both for residents and visitors and remained so long as the photographer continued to own it," relates Bay Window Bohemia, a book by Oscar Lewis about the artistic communities of San Francisco and Carmel.

A picture of the home taken by Genthe in 1908 shows a lone beach cottage against a background of trees and a grassy, windswept foreground. The picture is now in the Library of Congress.

The Seaview Inn, an eight-bedroom bed and breakfast inn, is one of Carmel's oldest hosteries and is pictured in a 1906 brochure of Carmel. According to early Pine Cone ads, it was run by the "Misses Stouts."

The present owners Marshall and Diane Hydorn are volunteers for the survey.

"The basic interior of the house is just as we found it and I believe it is pretty much the way it was built," Diane Hydorn said.

She and her husband intend to keep it that way, with some upgrading of the plumbing and electricity and interior decorating.

"There is a secluded rear garden with patio for use of guests and Carmel Heritage plans to serve some simple refreshments," she added.

The third home is known as the Col. Mack house after its last owner Col. Harold Mack who lived to be more than 100.

On four lots, the home was built by capitalist Col. R.D. Fry and according to information from Carmel Heritage, "exemplifies earlier-era large homes surrounded by magnificent planting with spacious interiors."

Only the main rooms will be open for the public.

In its time, the house has been the home to architect Charles Sumner Greene, one of America's most acclaimed architects and of Noel Sullivan, a patron of the arts and an early benefactor of the Carmel Music Society, the Carmel Bach Festival and the Monterey County Symphony.

The house is currently up for sale by Col. Mack's heirs who hope it will be sold to buyer who will keep it intact.

CARMEL... AS I SEE IT

By Betty Barron

Carmel Quaint or Fortress Facade?

IT TOOK an earthquake to prove that Carmel is built on solid ground. For the most part, Carmel is actually built on solid rock. A drive along Highway 1 from Atherton Road to Rio Road will prove my point. Raw rock juts out over the highway, as if carved to signal the approach to Big Sur and the mountains beyond.

Does it take a seismic event to prove how fortunate we are?

We do have a firm foundation on which to build. The few remaining little board and batten homes, which have withstood many a tremor, are testimony to the fact that we do not have to build a fortress to remain secure. Why then, are many of our new homes being built as if they might have to stand an assault either from nature or from man himself?

The argument for such building is that the land must be used to its maximum...that every square foot possible should be utilized. That bigger is better! Economically, I presume that this is right. If you are the owner of a tiny wooden structure, circa 1900, and you find the land worth many times its original purchase price, why not tear down the charming and quaint existing house and put up a square, high and imposing structure with three or four times the square footage? Practical? Yes. Esthetically pleasing? No!

I do not want to make a case for increasing tourism to Carmel. But, why do "they" come? Why don't "they" flock to San Jose, or Oakland...or Detroit...or Manchester, England? Travelers all over the world may spend a day or two or even a week in a big city, but when they seek a quiet corner for an extended stay, they think of the peace and tranquility of a seaside village such as Carmel.

After the 1906 earthquake and fire in San Francisco, Carmel welcomed many refugees from The City. They found housing in some of the still standing little cottages down near the ocean, and along Santa Lucia, as well as up in the woods, on Santa Fe and Santa Rita and Guadalupe. Some newer homes on Santa Lucia retain the character and charm of those older homes, but some have succumbed to the modern look.

Down near the corner of Santa Lucia and Scenic Drive there is a study in contrasts. One, a fortress with an unfriendly facade seems to frown at the world from its unassailable stone wall and underground garage with threatening portcullis "protecting" the entrance. Next door is a new cottage home with simulated thatching, a bay window, a stone-studded exterior and low, inviting wall set back from the street. One house seems to turn away from the sea and from all visitors. The other says "welcome" with warmth and a Carmel smile.

My objective in comparing these two houses is to try and create a discussion about the design of our already built environment, and to rekindle an awareness of our surroundings. We have something here in Carmel so precious and so precarious it should remain inviolate. We have long protected our trees through city codes. Now is the time to save our homes. Now is the time to build with care and consideration.

I quote an ardent environmentalist, a student of architecture, an "unmodern" man...HRH The Prince of Wales. "I would suggest that if you destroy the past...or consistently deny its relevance to the present, man eventually loses his soul and his roots. Seas' edge should be sacrosanct."

He was speaking mostly of England, of course, with the sea around the island constituting a barrier, and yet a place of retreat. There, in many places the seas' edge has been brutalized, made ugly and undesirable.

Do not let it happen to Carmel!

CARMEL QUAINt or Fortress Facade?
The two styles are exemplified by these two Carmel homes which sit side-by-side, one using every scrap of space allowed and the other allowing for landscaping and planting. (Betty Barron photos.)

Quake impact on Carmel business is more economic than physical

By NANCY HILLS

CARMEL IS experiencing a different kind of aftershock — an economic one.

Carmel inns and hotels are counting their losses from the earthquake, not in broken crockery or tumbled buildings, but in losses due to cancellations and a general lack of tourists in town.

"We've had lots of cancellations. With our five properties, we've probably lost about 400 nights, which is about $50,000," Inns by the Sea manager Gary Luce said. "Right now, we're running at less than 50 percent (occupancy)."

The five properties include the Candle Light Inn, Wayside, Carriage House, Dolphin Inn and Svendsgaards Inn.

"We had a gangbuster month going until the quake," said Dean Hanvey of Adobe and Colonial inns.

"We initially had a lot of people not show up — either because they were from the (San Francisco) Bay Area or other parts of the country. We even had cancellation letters sent to us by Federal Express so they would qualify for a refund," he said.

"This will affect the city revenues, everything," said David Wolf, Cypress Inn manager and Carmel Innkeepers Association president. Wolf said that the Cypress Inn is about 11 percent down from last year and lost about 102 rooms to date. Wolf blames news media coverage that emphasized the damage in San Francisco and never said that the Monterey Peninsula was virtually untouched.

At its meeting Nov. 7, the Carmel City Council will receive a report from city staff on the extent of the lost revenues, explained City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

The council will meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 7 in Carmel City Council Chambers at Carmel City Hall.

This fiscal quarter — from October through December — is the next to the last revenue-generating period, he added.

"The losses will be less than if it was during the spring or summer quarters," Schmitz said.

In an attempt to diffuse the bad publicity generated by the quake and the impression the reports left by the news media that Northern California is totally devastated, the Innkeepers Association has hired the publicity firm of McMullen/Dozoretz Associates of Los Angeles.

"We are preparing a two-pronged campaign," Linda Dozoretz explained. "First, we are going to the travel handlers — travel agencies and travel editors — to let them know everything is fine in Carmel. Second, we are emphasizing the quote that the media coverage has done more damage than the quake could possibly do. We are going to place stories with the news organizations that the peninsula sustained no damage."

The campaign will be throughout the country, she said, and specifically in the San Francisco Bay Area.

One outfall of the quake has been a drop in the number of people coming to the peninsula from the San Francisco Bay Area, many innkeepers said.

"One of the things that has hurt is that people from the Bay Area think they will have a tough time getting here," said Cal Jepson, manager of Carmel Valley Ranch Resort.

His operation is already beginning to return to normal, he added, and the two groups that cancelled during the first two weeks after the tremor simply moved to future dates.

Csaba Ajan of Quail Lodge also reported that they had a few cancellations to begin with but they are back up to normal now.

"The first 10 days following the quake, we had cancellations and no shows. Up to then we were looking at a record month. Now we will probably be down by 10 percent. After the initial 10 days that dropped off and we are full now," he said.

Mark Verbonich of The Pebble Beach Co. also reported that the Lodge at Pebble Beach and Spanish Bay experienced an approximately 20 percent loss in revenues but business appears to be back on track.

Some of the smaller operations with less of a marketing base have been hit harder.

Lisa Telfer of Green Lantern Inn in Carmel said that they had 85 percent occupancy in October 1988, but that dropped to 66 percent in October.

"We're still getting cancellations," she added. "We are a little more dependent on walk-ins, which is down considerably."

Other innkeepers reliant on walk-in traffic report the same decrease.

Telfer added that three other inns owned by the same organization that owns Green Lantern are doing better. The Cobblestone Inn in Carmel and Green Gables and Gosby in Pacific Grove are "doing well," she said.

Restaurants also report some losses. Workers at Carmel Cafe said business was down for the first two weeks after the quake but customers are coming back. Flaherty's Seafood Grill reports the same experience.

Greg Cellitti of Friar Tuck reported that his business was down about 20 percent, but businesses should be look on the bright side.

"Instead of everybody complaining, business people should be thankful they have a business at all. We could be like Santa Cruz or Watsonville," he said.

First Lady of the Monterey Peninsula

VIRGINIA STANTON was honored Friday night with "A Grand Gala By The Bay" in the DeAnza Ballroom of the Doubletree Hotel. It was a celebration for Virginia and a premiere of the Stanton Center to be built for the Maritime Museum just behind the hotel.

Paintings from the William and Patricia O'Riley collection of sailors wool (all at least 200 years old), decorated the entrance. The art of couching was taken up by the mariners during the long seafaring weeks.

A short program was staged before dinner was served. Gordon Paul Smith, chairman of the Monterey History & Art Association, bestowed the title "First Lady of the Monterey Peninsula" on Mrs. Stanton as he spoke of her generous support of the museum building fund — $1 million.

Myles Williams, master of ceremonies, had just finished singing the Jean Ehrman lyrics written especially for Virginia (as she did for other songs of the evening), to the tune The Object of My Affection when he spotted Santa Claus (Pat Ireland), coming aboard. Myles assured him, "Yes, Santa, there really is a Virginia."

Santa's bag contained gifts for the lady who has spent a half a century giving to her community. Among the gifts: greetings from her friends Bob and Dolores Hope from Hong Kong; George Shearing singing a song he wrote for Virginia just before he left for Asia; a commendation from the U.S. Congress; and a visit to the gala by House Beautiful editor, Elizabeth Gordon, courtesy of Maggie Eastwood.

At last, we learned how it all started. Elizabeth Gordon came out to do photos of the home Robert Stanton had designed for his family in Carmel Valley. She was so impressed she said it would influence architecture for decades to come.

While the crew was working Virginia realized she should feed them. When she brought food to the table, Elizabeth said, "Wait. We can't eat that — we have to photograph it first." The next thing Virginia knew, she was food editor for House Beautiful.

Ms. Gordon said, "Virginia broke the rules when she gave a party. It was very fresh." To which Virginia answered, "You started the whole thing, Elizabeth. Otherwise, I would be playing bridge and doing nothing." (I tend to doubt that.)

Monterey Mayor Dan Albert came up to make a presentation saying, "I think it is appropriate to think of royalty when I think of you, Virginia. I am giving you a box with a gold key to the heart of the city like the one I gave to the King of Spain." After a thank-you, Virginia asked with a twinkle in her eye, "Does this key open the treasury of Monterey?"

To Mr. Smith, Virginia directed this comment, "Gordon asked me for a million dollars on the wharf. I'm never going to walk on the wharf again." Adding in jest, "In the future when you see me with a tin cup and a basket of apples, please buy an apple."

Actually she thanked Gordon for "propositioning" her on the wharf saying, "love makes the world go round, and I love the peninsula." And, all the people here love her right back. It was not for the million-dollar gift alone that hundreds came out to honor Virginia Stanton. More than 19 organizations benefiting from her talent, time and generosity were represented by people happily waving signs on stage while Mr. Smith announced that contributions to the Stanton Center have attained a total of $4 1/2 million of the $5 million needed to build the center.

Myles Gordon sang Thanks For the Memories and Gordon warbled special lyrics to If Dreams Came True with Marjorie Chomiak at the piano. After-dinner dancers were thrilled with the music. With Mario Pacini's Moonlighters Band, who needs those groups from San Francisco?

Working on the gala were Kip Hudson, April Green, Carvel van der Burch, Kitty Ragsdale, Jean Darragh, Norma Lee, Morley Brown, John Light, Karen LeVett and scads of other Virginia fans.

Thank-you Virginia, for more than half a century of caring. The past weekend was a time for awards and there is a special dedicated group of people that deserves awards more than any group that comes to mind. They direct their efforts to assisting clients of Gateway Center, offering a pleasant environment, training and finding a place of independence in the community for those least able to care for themselves — those with mental handicaps. Everyone in this group shares the urgency and the need — the board, the staff, the auxiliary, friends and businesses working for the support of Gateway Center in Pacific Grove.

For the fourth year, the board of directors presented awards of recognition for outstanding contributions by benefactors, employees, and helpful friends at a reception at Mission Ranch Barn.

Gerald Dalton, board chairman, was emcee and presented the following awards: Sam Bell for his outstanding professional service as a speech pathologist. Through his patience and skill, a mother heard her son call her "Mother" for the first time in 35 years.

MYLES WILLIAMS held a basket of apples for Virginia Stanton as she held a tin cup she vowed she would use to sell them.

KITTY AND Henry Ragsdale attended the tribute to Virginia Stanton and the Maritime Museum.

REPRESENTING ONLY a few of the many organizations that have received help from Virginia Stanton were Mike Stanton, her son, who later unveiled the Stanton Center sign; Douglas Despard, state arts commission; Rick Lawrence, city arts commission; Joe Kordsmier, Carmel Heritage; Fred Stanley, Carmel Foundation; Dirk van der Burch, heart fund; Burney Threadgill, Guide Dogs for the Blind.

WALT STEWART, Khonying Lursakdi Sampatirisi and Burney Threadgill joined Virginia Stanton at a dinner given in her honor.

FORMER EDITOR of House Beautiful, Elizabeth Gordon, acknowledged the applause of the dinner guests, including Gordon Paul Smith and Virginia Stanton.

The reward for going over the Blake's Bookshop was an autograph by the famous author Alexandra Stoddard. Every waking hour our lives are filled with color and the author adds to the joy of color with her Book of Color. Ms. Stoddard, one of America's top interior designers and the author of Living a Beautiful Life and Living Beautifully Together, came to the MP for the first time in 28 years.

Although color surrounds us daily, to organize and use it effectively is more complicated. She covers: color as language, color sense, power of color, how to make color choices and finding your own personal color palette. And there is even a section on The Seaside — ideal for this coastal region.

Ms. Stoddard, as is everyone who goes to Blake's Bookshop, is delightfully surprised. Marsha Blake always wanted a bookshop and two years ago her dream came true with Blake's Bookshop, located at The Crossroads. Mark Lupo designed the warm, welcoming interiors and were it not for a checkout counter you could be sitting in a friend's library in front of a fireplace on comfortable furniture surrounded by tempting reading materials.

This was the atmosphere for the special tea party and booksigning. Mark designed a tablecloth for the tea service. Finger sandwiches and tiny tartlettes were placed on trays in the library section.

Ms. Stoddard, accompanied by her able young assistant, Liza Abernethy, promises she will not wait another 28 years before returning to visit Carmel.

Thanks a million to two separate efforts to raise money to help earthquake victims. To KWAQ 97-FM, the Monterey Plaza and Kelly/Booth Entertainment for raising more than $2,000 on Friday night that has been sent to Santa Cruz and Watsonville. Donating talent were Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers, the Bow Williams Band with Linda Lukenas, Roger Eddy, Greg Franks, Greg Morrison (sound); mimes Walter and Debbie White and magicians Mr. Miraculous and Robert Basqual. More than 200 people joined in the fun at the Plaza.

Thanks also to KXDC AM-FM for launching an on-air appeal for food, clothing, blankets, cleaning materials and money. In less than two days $1,400 in cash and five truckloads of supplies were on the way to the people of Santa Cruz County. One listener wrote a check for $500. Thanks, Ron Soergel, manager, and hats off to KXDC listeners.

If you've never heard Mary Lee Sunseri sing, you've missed a lot. Not only does she sing beautifully but she is a songwriter as well. Here's your chance to hear her. In celebration of Book Week, the Monterey Library opens the Community Room Nov. 17th for a free performance for children and adults, 4 to 5 p.m.

SANTA (Salvation Army Asks Neighbors to Adopt), plans to help twice as many families as last year (300), and has set the start-up date for Nov. 28 with an Open House at the SA Community Center, Seaside. They wish to find families who desire to share the joy of Christmas with others. Share time with them, bring a tree along with a basket of food and toys. Many businesses have beautiful trees that are abandoned when everyone goes home for the holidays. The Salvation Army will locate needy families. For info call the Army 899-4911 or Jim Cota (founder of SANTA), at 394-6586.

CARMEL CRIME CRUSHER

Sigurd Russell, in his publication "For Art's Sake," has the following to say about our police department:

"The usual police department of a small town reminds one of an imitation of a Max Sennett motion picture comedy. But Carmel-by-the-Sea, which is sublimely different in everything has a one-man police force of great romance and efficiency. August Englund is at the same time Town Marshal, Tax Collector, Health Officer and Street Superintendent. He was formerly Chief of Police of Monterey. He wears a neat khaki uniform and rides his beat mounted on a beautiful horse. He came to Carmel when it was incorporated in 1916."

"There is no jail in Carmel," he said. "About a month ago a burglar tried to be funny. I got him. He is now in San Quentin. There was a holdup. I got him. Another fellow tried a job. I got him. Three years ago a sneak thief came here. I got him. That is about all. They do not bother us much." He gets them all.

HITLER AND HITLERISM

In connection with the reporting at some length in last week's Pine Cone of a locally delivered appraisal of Hitler and his program we would like to go on record (by popular request) on our feelings about Mr. Hitler.

To state completely our views it is necessary to divide the topic into Hitler and Hitlerism.

Hitler himself, in our opinion, is the tragic misfortune of Germany and Europe. He is the result of mismanagement, dishonesty, intrigue and stupidity in European statecraft. He is the sore that has festered on the diseased German political body, that body having been rendered and kept diseased through European corruption.

On the other hand we have Hitlerism, or Nazism, a form of government which has spread its tentacles beyond the boundaries of Germany. It is extremely unfortunate that there are some in the United States who have listened sympathetically to the siren song of Nazism. However, we've got to recognize what we have in Democracy and take steps to preserve it. There can only be one choice for Americans, and we must be equipped to withstand the infiltrations of foreign doctrines.

PLANS FOR MORE DEVELOPMENT AT VALLEY ENTRANCE

New commercial development is being planned at the entrance to Carmel Valley by Havic Corporation, new owners of Carmel Rancho shopping center, also by Carmel Properties Company on land fronting on Highway One across from Mission Fields. The latter development will be called Carmel Center.

According to Gorge R. Walker, attorney for Havic Corporation, a new and larger facility for Safeway Stores Inc. will be constructed in Carmel Rancho across Carmel Rancho Boulevard from the present Safeway store.

CHURCH OF WAYFARER CELEBRATES 75TH YEAR

The history of the Church of the Wayfarer traces back to the outdoor meetings of a small group of Carmelites in 1902.

Before begetting Carmel's first Protestant church, Protestant Carmelites had to travel by horse and buggy — or walk over the hill to the Methodist Campground in Pacific Grove, originally established as a unique summer campsite by the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In May 1904, the Rev. George Clifford, now retired, was appointed to form the First Methodist Episcopal in Carmel. For nearly half a year, the congregation met outdoors at the corner of what is now Dolores and Ocean. When it rained, the group found shelter in L.C. Horne's barn on San Carlos near Sixth.

J.F. Devendorf, one of the founders and city fathers of Carmel, donated two lots on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. After receiving additional donations totaling $700, the first church was able to open, debt free, on Nov. 4, 1904.

VOTERS TO DECIDE FATE OF HOTEL TAX RATE INCREASE

A measure that would raise about $500,000 to be split evenly between new economic development programs and cultural activities will go before voters Nov. 6.

Measure A will raise the 8 percent hotel tax to 10 percent. One percent of the money generated will be used for economic development programs, and the other 1 percent is to be earmarked for cultural activities.

Two-thirds of those voting must approve the measure. It would go into effect Jan. 1, 1985.

AND

SOMETIMES THAT

By Nancy Hills

"IF YOU are anywhere on the Monterey Peninsula during a major earthquake, be in the aquarium." That is what Steve Webster, the Monterey Bay Aquarium's director of education, has told each class of volunteer guides.

My friend George Powell remembered those prophetic words after he walked into the aquarium shortly after 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 17. George, a Carmel Valley resident who was in the original class of volunteer guides, wears a second hat as a staff member in visitor services and it was in that capacity that he walked through the main entrance on that day. Then the earthquake hit.

"There was no panic," George told me. "Both staff and visitors were startled and most of them just stopped still where they were. Many eyes turned up toward the killer whales near the entrance, which were swaying." In fact, they only swayed a little, George reported, but in the excitement afterward the amount of swaying recounted by some visitors increased in proportion to their excitement.

"If people moved at all, they gravitated to the walls," George continued, "apparently they wanted to get out from under the California gray whale and the other life-sized models. George remembered Dr. Webster telling the guides that the slim cables holding these mammals aloft were made of stainless steel and no one should worry about the creatures coming down to earth suddenly. "But the visitors hadn't heard that!" George said.

The aquarium was closed the next day while on emergency generator power and engineers completed a thorough check of the entire building. the careful planning that went into building a facility that could withstand an even greater earthquake had been justified.

As a member of the original guide class myself, I new about that careful planning. Even so, it occurred to me after the earthquake that I might not have wanted to be standing in front of the kelp forest, with its 335,000 gallons of water, when the earthquake hit. But all was well there, too. A volunteer diver who was in the kelp forest at that moment described hearing a sound "as though a helicopter had come down right on top of the kelp." That made him want to get out of there as fast as he could, and he did. The kelp and all the critters remained, apparently undisturbed.

IT DOESN'T seem possible that it has been five years since I sat in a classroom at MPC and prepared nervously for the final exam on nudibranchia...coelenterates...Enhydra lutris...As a member of the aquarium's first guide class, however, I have a special feeling about the recent celebration of its fifth anniversary. Starting "school" well before the aquarium opened, our class was thrilled to be allowed into the facility about half-way through our 15-week course - finally to see, to experience, the wonders that we had been reading about. Five years later, I still have that sense of wonder whenever I am there.

There were approximately 265 members in the first class; about 85 are still active. We were honored at a special party during the fifth anniversary celebration. Not all of us are still active as guides; some have moved into other volunteer activities in education, administration, or at the information desk. All of us continue to be challenged by the ever-growing, ever-expanding aquarium and by the new guide classes and apprentices coming in from time to time.

SPEAKING OF mammals: don't you just love squirrels? I did. But I could do without the one that selected my patio for its new Carmel home. This "cute" creature chewed through a main irrigation line, releasing a flood of water into our newly-converted basement suite, right onto the new rugs. The damage is being repaired and we are keeping a close watch on the squirrel and his new live-in girlfriend. I can report that contrary to what the SPCA suggested, they seem to like the black pepper we put out with some seeds, and the smell of ammonia-soaked rags says home, sweet home to them. Do squirrels hibernate? I hope so!

THIS WEEK'S unscientific survey: on my daily walks around the Point and Carmel Beach, I have observed that when a couple — male and female — are walking toward me, it is more often the male who will speak: "Hello," "Hi," "Good morning," and once a jaunty "How-do." When it's a woman by herself, almost always she will speak up. When there's a male by himself, it's totally unpredictable. My impression is that most of them don't speak at all. Likewise if it's two or more women; they talk to each other.

Of course you understand that for the sake of this survey, I refrained from taking the initiative in speaking, myself.

AT THE aforementioned aquarium, my young partner on the information desk conducted a survey for one of her classes. She wanted to find out who asked the most questions of us: men, or women? Well, it came out about even; only slightly more men than women initiated questions throughout the afternoon. The ratio of men to women visitors was almost even as well. Haven't you always wanted to know that?

This and Sometimes That

SPLENDID SENIOR(S)

Sometimes splendid seniors come in pairs: for example, Lovell and Libby Langstroth. Very splendid, very much a pair.

Early on, their paths were divergent. Libby gained a master's degree at Chicago and after the death of her first husband she returned to school at UC Berkeley for a PhD in anthropology. During this time, Lovell was pursuing a steady path toward his MD at Stanford and practicing internal medicine in Oakland, with time off for service in the Navy during World War II.

But both had other interests as well, which finally brought them together, and to Carmel. For Libby it was ichthyology ("I practically grew up in the Steinhart Aquarium"), and for Lovell, it was diving and photography.

After their marriage, Libby took up diving and they enrolled in a course on invertebrate zoology at Moss Landing. "That turned the direction of our lives," Lovell said, "it got us going in marine biology." There was also a course in sub-tidal habitats at Hopkins Marine Lab, where they went diving every day with a bunch of undergrads from Stanford who "adopted" them. Lovell described himself and Libby as being "over the hill" by then, but I don't know of any hill they are over - yet.

When retirement beckoned in 1980, there was some discussion — but not much — about whether to move to Libby's "spread" in the Napa valley, or to Carmel, which they had come to appreciate on their way to and from diving and photography expeditions in southern California. Carmel won and the Langstroths now live in a wonderful home in Carmel Meadows. Their view includes the waters near Pt. Lobos where they do some of their diving. There is a dark room, too, where they produce their stunning color prints of marine life.

Since retirement (the word is not appropriate), the Langstroths have traveled extensively in the Pacific, diving and taking pictures. They have written several "little articles" (two published in Natural History magazine and one in Pacific Discovery).

Earlier, they had taken a course on marine biology for divers, taught by Dr. Steve Webster. This was prophetic as Dr. Webster became director of education at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, and the Langstroths immediately recognized the aquarium as a "natural" for them to become involved with. In fact, many of their pictures were used for graphics as various aquarium exhibits were developed under Dr. Webster's direction.

Education — their own and that of others — is a key word in the Langstroths' extensive vocabulary. Together they joined the first class for aquarium guides. Even among these peers they stand out in their knowledge of marine biology, diving ("we're approaching 600 hours just in the Monterey Bay area"), photography and their enthusiasm for sharing all this with their fellow guides and visitors to the aquarium.

Little wonder, then, that Lovell says: "We certainly have fun together. Life is enormously exciting and stimulating." He was speaking of how it is for them; Lovell and Libby make life, especially marine life, exciting and stimulating for so many others as well.

...AND THAT

THE SUNSET Center bond-burning party and chili dinner had plenty of takers but it was "family hold-back" night. Both Bud's Pub and Wendy's were to donate the chili. However, when the Sunset Center folk arrived to pick up the chili at Wendy's they were told "they" had already been there.

At least someone had and claimed they were from Sunset Center to pick up the food. Off they went with the goodies, leaving the real Sunset Center chili picker-uppers later that day empty-handed. So there was no chili from Wendy's and members of the commission and Friend's of Sunset Foundation took less or none to help ensure there was enough. Which was probably just fine with Cultural Commission Chairman Bob Infelise, who came dashing in to the ceremony from judging the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center Great Chili Cookoff. Bud's Pub came in third in that contest, but clearly took first place at the Sunset Center chili dinner.

I WAS happily reading along in Plugged Nickel by mystery writer Robert Campbell, a Carmel resident, when I came to pages 36 and 37. There, the main character, a railroad detective named Jake Hatch, introduces another character, a small town sheriff who originally came from the big city.

"I've known George McGilvray for sometime now," Hatch tells the reader. McGilvray? Isn't that name familiar? Isn't the Carmel chief of police named Jack McGilvray? Didn't he come from a big city?

Hatch continues on and describes this Sheriff McGilvray, but I don't want to spoil a good mystery. You'll just have to read it and decide for yourself. "Presbyterian minister"?

RECOGNIZE SOME some of these headlines: "Carmel Almost Loses Red Cross Volunteer Ambulance Service," "Do Parking Lots Enhance The City?" "Youth Center Making Annual Fund Appeal," "The Downtown Parking Game." Nothing is new. I came across these headlines in 1963 Pine Cones when I was researching Sunset Center articles. It's always like that. The old newspapers have almost the same stories as we write now — including how anti-cultural the city council is (an editorial in 1963).

Dale Hekhuis

Says
'This Is Not Fair!'

Rancho Canada golf course has its water!

Where is ours?

Dale Hekhuis (pronounced Heck-lis) will give residents a strong voice on the Water Board. In addition to fairer rationing, Dale Hekhuis advocates a new dam/reservoir, several short-term projects to protect us from drought now, and limits on new water connections until we increase our water supply.

Dale Hekhuis' ad is not as big as Billy DeBerry's, as his campaign expenses are not being paid by the developers, hotel owners, or golf course owners. Dale Hekhuis has not received large campaign contributions from Nick Lombardo or Pebble Beach Company executives.

Dale Hekhuis does have a record of leadership that has made him the choice of community leaders and org-ganizations that share his goal — increasing our water supply while protecting our environment and quality of life.

Dale Hekhuis led the Residents Water Committee petition drive that obtained 10,478 signatures to limit new water hook-ups during rationing. Water Board director Billy DeBerry ignored the petition..

Change the Water Board — Elect Dale Hekhuis

It will take two new directors to change the Water Board majority.
Dale Hekhuis supports Bob Russell for the second position.

Join these organizations, elected officials and community leaders in supporting Dale Hekhuis for election on November 7. We regret the lack of space for listing the names of many, many other supporters.

BUSINESS BEAT

By David Leland

A change in the wind

A BUSINESS occupying one of the busiest corner locations in downtown Carmel for the past seven years is about to depart.

Roxy, formerly called Seasons, is slated to vanish from its Ocean and San Carlos location sometime after the first week in November.

"It's time for a change," says store manager Regina Smith, who adds that owners Roxy and Michelle Rapp are finding it increasingly difficult to run the trendy women's store from their home in Palo Alto.

Six employees will be looking for work. Perhaps they can land a job with Coach Leather Bags, which is scheduled to buy the Rapp's lease.

Open house... Chase Manhattan of California's Carmel office, located at 3775 Via Nona Marie, Suite 200, will host a grand opening reception between 4 and 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 9, for customers and real estate and business professionals.

Chase specializes in jumbo mortgages and tailors loans to meet its customers individual needs. Chase also offers home equity loans and lines of credit, loans for luxury autos and boats and vacation home financing.

The office, one of 14 statewide, opened in October 1988, and is managed by Vice President Maria Catanzaro, who has been with the company for the past three years.

Time to wait and see... That's the word from Rancho San Carlos owner Arthur Oppenheimer concerning the sale of his 20,000-acre spread located in the hills east of Carmel Valley Road stretching from near Highway 1 to Carmel Valley Village.

While the area has been rife with rumors hinting of Japanese investors purchasing the parcel, Oppenheimer would only say the interested party is a San Francisco firm. "Whether they have Japanese investors or not is none of my business," he said during a telephone interview from his San Francisco office.

The group of investors has until Feb. 15 of next year to make up their minds Oppenheimer said.

"We have a firm price that is not a public figure," said Oppenheimer when asked of the land's price tag. "They think they want to buy it."

Oppenheimer added that it is with some regret that the sale may take place; he has managed the Oppenheimer trust for almost 40 years.

"I'd like to keep it in the family," he said. "But if they meet our price, we'll see what happens."

For those feeling edgy... Life Energetics, a new business offering a wholistic approach to stress management, opened Oct. 30 in the Carmel Shopping Center, Suite 6.

Therapists there are members of the American Massage Therapy Association and specialize in Swedish and deep tissue massage techniques, shiatsu and polarity therapy, reflexology and colon therapy.

Owned by Peggy and Mary Lemanski and Virginia Harbaugh, Life Energetics also offers a variety of health improvement and maintenance programs, including classes in hatha yoga, personal fitness training and stress management.

The studio is open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and Saturday by appointment.

Up in the air... Leaves are gathering on the steps leading to the basement concern known as Dilli Deli at the corner of Ocean and Monte Verde.

It seems that owners Herbert and Holly Fishbach owe some $9,800 in back rent to Peter and Mary Delfino, according to a sign posted on the door dated Oct. 20.

By Ocean Avenue standards, the monthly rent on the building is quite small — about $1,100.

According to the Delfinos, the Fishbachs missed paying rent in January, February, August and December of 1988 and February, March, May, July and September of this year.

While it is unclear whether the two parties will reach some agreement, one thing is certain: the large jar of dill pickles still resting on the counter inside aren't getting any younger.

New CV Chamber members... Joining the ranks of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce are Jeff's Janitorial and Saddle Mountain Recreation Park.

Jeff Peterson and his crew operate a janitorial service that specializes in commercial spaces and guest homes. Jeff's Janitorial also cleans carpets under the moniker of Professional Carpet Care.

Saddle Mountain Recreation Park on Shute Road in Carmel Valley, now under new ownership and recently remodelled, has hired Andy Moncrief as general manager.

The park offers tent cabins and teepees as well as RV spaces and many acres of hiking trails. It is also available for group picnics and other functions.

Local boy makes good... Carmel resident Arthur John Handel III has been named Director of Winery Operations for Vintners International in Gonzales, according to Frank Jerant, executive vice president, West Coast operations.

Handel will be responsible for the cellar, bottling and quality control departments at the facility, which bottles wine for Paul Masson Vineyards, Taylor California Cellars and Monterey Vineyard.

They're all wet... Carmel Valley-based Management & Construction Services Inc. (MCSI) has more than 40 years experience in the construction, operation and maintenance of a variety of water system.

Owners Peter Garneau, Peter Dew and Russell Hatch guarantee that they can build you a system to capture, store and distribute water to your garden. Not a bad idea in these critically dry times we live in on the peninsula.

Splitter group... Carmel native Doug Thompson and Jo Ellen Teele have announced the opening of Thompson/Teele Public Relations and Marketing in downtown Monterey.

For the past seven years, Thompson, a graduate of Carmel Middle and Carmel High schools, has worked locally in PR, marketing and special event management.

Teele has worked locally in PR, marketing and radio for the past six years, and holds a degree in mass communications from Arizona State University.

English-style... The newly opened Tack Box bears a closer look, specializing in English riding apparel and tack.

Owner Virginia Connelly, however, cautions interested parties against giving up hope in finding the small boutique. It's located in the bowels of The Court of Enchanted Oaks, on the north side of Seventh between San Carlos and Dolores.

Connelly adds that her store does not cater to the tourist trade, but attempts to help local equestrians.

Hours are 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., closed Monday.

Carmel Cares... That's right, and the CBA, CRA and Carmel Innkeepers Association (I didn't have the heart to write CIA), have banded together to solicit donations for those victimized by the Oct. 17 earthquake.

The drive kicks off on Friday, Nov. 3, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., when donations can be given at Ted and Bob Leidig's vacant store at Ocean and Dolores.

What's needed? Money, food, volunteers, baby goods and linen and bedding.

For more information call 624-2522, 624-3933 or 624-7022.

Also, the Salvation Army needs volunteers to work at the Firestone Plant in Salinas, sorting items that have been given to aid earthquake victims. Call 899-4911.

Football rivalry

FOR THE past 40 years Carmel High School Varsity football and Pacific Grove have been engaged in an intense rivalry. The trophy, representing the tremendous pride gained from a victory, is the bronzed shoe of a former Carmel High School athletic director and teacher.

Each year the game is awaited with nervous anticipation and excitement. This year's game is right around the corner and Carmel High is as ready as ever.

In the years after World War II, a few of Carmel High's football coaches recognized the importance of this rivalry. J.O. Handley, one of Carmel's varsity coaches in the late '40s along with a few others, came up with the idea of a trophy as a symbol of the pride which is passed along with it. The shoe is actually a bronzed football cleat of Lloyd Miller's, who at that time was Carmel High's athletic director and a teacher. Little did they know that the traditional rivalry would carry on as long as it has, and generate as much enthusiasm as it does.

A former player and coach Jeff Wright, reveals his thoughts on the "shoe" tradition. "I don't think anyone who has played for Carmel or Pacific Grove forgets that the trophy is there, or has any doubt of its importance."

Coach Wright has never forgotten the "shoe" game that he played in. The 14-12 victory was not just another win. The pride and respect that was gained from the win was overwhelming, and the "shoe" was just icing on the cake.

There is much excitement about this year's game. Carmel needs to fill the hole that has been lurking in its trophy case for the past two years. This year's varsity team has high spirits and is seeking revenge on its rival PG. Peter Komposch, a senior captain, feels they have a great chance of obtaining the "shoe," which has been dearly missed.

"I feel that up to now we've been playing to the pace of other teams; because of this we've been coming up a little bit short. If we go out on the field, and play 'our game,' and up to our potential, we can beat anyone." Peter's thoughts were those of frustration, but he has complete faith in this year's team.

For some seniors, the PG game will be their last competitive football game ever. If this doesn't get their intensity flowing, the "shoe" will. As Devin Meheen, a senior captain, says, "We've been lacking that 'fire in the eyes'; I think that this game, being the 'shoe' game, will bring that fire back."

On Friday, Nov. 10th, this year's game will be played on Pacific Grove's field. Whether or not Carmel will have the "fire in the eyes" that it needs, is not known. However, I feel that a victory is in the making.

For all those Pacific Grove fans who are reading this, and have doubts about our so-called victory, do you remember the score 27-7? Because I sure do! Not only did Carmel retain the "shoe" in '86, but, to put it nicely, we destroyed PG, and this year we can do it again.

(Editor's Note: Emily Rubin is a senior at Carmel High School where she is the Associated Student Body publicity representative. She plays varsity tennis, basketball and softball. She'll report on Carmel High happenings every other week in these pages.)

Students of the Month

VICKI HARRISON and Tom Hawkins, both seniors, have been selected to share Student of the Month honors by the Carmel High School foreign language department. Harrison is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Harrison of Carmel. She is active in CHS affairs, including serving as secretary of student body and co-captain of the volleyball team. She also plays basketball, represented Carmel High at California Girls' State, and works as a junior volunteer at Community Hospital. She hopes to attend a University of California campus after graduating in June. Hawkins is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Hawkins of Carmel Valley. In addition to a strong academic record, he was elected attorney general at Boys' State last year and was selected to go to the Soviet Union as an exchange student by the New Forum. He is co-captain of the varsity water polo team and member of the varsity swim team. He studies classical guitar and is a wind-surfing enthusiast. Both are also involved in the Peer Counseling program at CHS.

According to Phil Gray, chapter public relations, on one day last week 1,060 people were fed three meals each and 135 slept overnight in the chapter's shelter at the Veteran's Hall in Watsonville. Almost 400 volunteers have helped the chapter out from Day 1 of the earthquake, Gray said. Also needed are volunteers from the Watsonville area.

THE NEW FORUM

Four Soviet high school students and four teachers, accompanied by a coordinator, will arrive on the Monterey Peninsula Thursday, Nov. 2, for a busy two-week visit sponsored by The New Forum.

The public will have an opportunity to meet them at the monthly New Forum luncheon Monday, Nov. 6, at the Lodge in Pebble Beach. The visiting students and teachers will sit at tables scattered through the dining room.

Luncheon speakers will be Tatiana Dombracheva, the student-teacher coordinator who is a director of the Moscow Peace Committee, and Paula Garb, San Francisco native who has lived and worked as a journalist in Moscow for 14 years.

"The Soviet Union Now: The Two Sides of Freedom" will be their topic. Garb, a graduate of Moscow University, is the author of two books on life in the Soviet Union - They Came to Stay: Americans in the USSR, and Where the Old Are Young: Long Life in the Soviet Caucasus.

The visitors will be returning a similar visit by peninsula high school students and teachers to the Soviet Union last March 12-26, according to May Waldroup, Carmel Valley, who is coordinating local arrangements.

The Soviet guests, coming from Moscow, Kiev and Tallinn (Estonia), will spend most of their time in visits to classes at all public and private high schools on the Monterey Peninsula. In spare time, they will engage in recreational activities, including a visit to Point Lobos.

As they near the end of their visit, they will share a three-day workshop weekend at Yosemite with the peninsula students and teachers who visited the Soviet Union last spring.

The exchange was made possible by a $10,000 grant from an anonymous donor, Waldroup said.

Reservations for the Paula Garb-Tatiana Dombracheva luncheon can be made by calling The New Forum at 625-9967.

Nov. 4, at the Monterey Plaza, the Grand Hotel on Cannery Row, overlooking Monterey Bay.

Thirty wineries and 20 caterers will present their best offerings in an elegant and festive setting from 7 to 9 p.m., accompanied by musicians such as the Bill Allison Trio. Following the distribution of door prizes, e.g., mixed half cases of wine, guests can kick up their heels to the rhythm and blues of the popular band, Terry Hanck and the Soul Rockers.

According to Paulette Lynch, development director and chairperson of the event, "This year's tasting will be better than ever. In addition to the ballroom, we take over a number of adjacent rooms." ### SENIOR LEGISLATORS RETURN FROM ANNUAL LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Senior Sen. John McCune of Salinas returned recently from the annual session of the California Senior Legislature held from Oct. 15-19, in Sacramento. Also in attendance from Monterey County was Seymour Lesser, a Senior Assemblyman.

"We reviewed 132 proposals which had been submitted by senior legislators," said McCune. "Of these 85 were passed, including three that I had submitted." One of the three bills dealt with the reporting of crimes against the elderly; another dealt with home equity loans to seniors who are forced out of their homes because repayments exceed their income, or through fraud; and the third related to funding for senior centers."

The Senior Legislature, at its final session, voted on the ranking of all of the bills passed, and the top 10 became priority with regard to seeking sponsorship by members of the regular Legislature.

"For the third year, my bill regarding the funding of senior centers placed in the Top 10. The first year it was the fifth priority, last year it was the second, and this year it was the third priority. This indicates the concern felt by seniors of California about the operation and maintenance of multi-purpose senior centers. Sen. Henry Mello is currently sponsoring my bill as SB 179. Unfortunately, it is currently

Winning school

SEASIDE HIGH School was the winner in the recent Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood Program School Donor Challenge that pitted two area high schools in a drive to see which school could enlist more students and staff members to donate blood. Seaside High defeated Monterey High, 187 pints to 120 in the annual contest. A similar contest pitting smaller-enrollment schools such as Carmel and Pacific Grove high schools will be initiated in December. More than 600 pints of blood were donated by eight peninsula high schools in the past year. Accepting the trophy were (left to right): Robert Alonzo, Dave Miller (director of GATE program), Debbie DeVictoria, Jim Anderson (principal), Linda Woody, Ruth Nye (school nurse), and Samuel Morales. McCune was honored by his election to the Senior Legislature's Joint Rules Committee. This 11-member Committee directs the affairs of the 120-member Senior Legislature when it is not in session. Its principal duty is advocacy for the 10 priorities of the Senior Legislature. The committee meets monthly in Sacramento. "I look forward to a busy year ahead," said McCune. "In addition to duties with the Joint Rules Committee, I must find legislators who will sponsor my other two proposals and continue to seek support for Senator Mello's SB 179."

Financing Your Future

Q: Do I really need to get involved in financial planning?

A: If you want to reach specific financial objectives — buying a house, or funding a child's education, or ensuring a comfortable retirement — you can benefit from financial planning.

Maybe you're like many middle-income families that don't need a formal financial plan. They just need capable advice on how to achieve simple financial goals. Or maybe you're more like other families that do require a more comprehensive plan to attain their financial objectives.

Whatever your financial status, a competent professional can help you make sense of the tangle of tax regulations, market trends and investment opportunities. After you select a financial planner, get your relationship off to the right start.

First, discuss what kind of financial services you need. If you need a comprehensive plan, discuss your short- and long-term goals. Second, learn what services your planners can provide and what other financial services you require. Some professionals work together with lawyers and accountants to provide a full range of services. Third, have any financial recommendations detailed in writing for your review. Before committing to an action plan, understand all the risks and costs.

Carmel Pine Cone joins forces with Army newspaper

By DAVID LELAND

PINE CONE Publisher Bill Brown announced this week that the newspaper has joined forces with the U.S. Army, and will begin publishing the Fort Ord Panorama Dec. 1, with the first issue slated for Dec. 8.

The Panorama, which has a circulation of 20,000 and is staffed by soldiers and civilian personnel, serves military on the peninsula with local and worldwide military news.

"Our aim is to provide command information to our soldiers, family members and retirees in the area," said Major L.D. Walker, chief of public affairs. "We're very excited about the prospect of beginning a relationship with The Pine Cone."

In being awarded a license to print for the next year, with five one-year options, The Pine Cone, a subsidiary of Brown & Wilson, Inc., will print the paper and gain advertising revenues.

"We hope to have a long-term relationship with the U.S. Army," said Brown, who added that he will open a sales office in Marina.

Two reporters will also be hired by Brown to assist the on-base operations in producing editorial copy for the Panorama.

Walker said the two reporters will be given steady beats at Fort Ord, which have currently been covered only when there were personnel available.

"It turns these beats into a constant for me, rather than a variable," Walker said, citing areas not previously covered, such as the hospital and the base facilities operation.

In addition to publishing The Pine Cone, Brown & Wilson owns and operates The Monterey Peninsula Review, Pacific Grove Monarch, co-owns Buying the Best and publishes Action, the official newsletter of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

The company was one of two firms bidding for the contract to print the Panorama, which for the past two years has been printed by The Salinas Californian.

Under the new agreement, The Panorama will be printed at the facilities of The King City Rustler and will be available on Fridays, as has been the case for almost 50 years of circulation.

Council to consider appeal of denial of lot line change

THE CARMEL City Council at its next meeting will consider a request to allow the rearrangement of lot lines to allow two building sites in place of one.

The request is part of an appeal of the planning commission's denial to permit a lot line adjustment of a parcel located on the east side of Torres Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

The council will meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 1 in Carmel City Council Chambers at city hall.

The commission's action was the second denial of a lot line adjustment that would change a single building site to two building sites.

Both sites had one legal lot and portions of two others. To create two building sites, the lot lines would have to be legally moved to permit two full building sites. According to the planning staff, there are 70 other parcels in a similar position in Carmel.

The commission denied the lot line adjustment because it would set a precedent for the 70 other lots in the same situation.

In other business, the council will:

- Consider an appointment to the planning commission to replace commissioner Bill Brown, publisher of The Carmel Pine Cone. Brown resigned after Brown & Wilson, Inc. received the contract for the Fort Ord Panorama newspaper (see related story this issue).

Brown said with the new contract, he would not have the time needed to devote to the planning commission.

- Receive a report that the planning commission found the purchase of the Hodges property in compliance with the general plan and a report on the negotiation progress for the land.

- Receive a recommendation from the staff about how to proceed with changes to the R-1 design and development standards.

The council has been conducting special meetings about the changes but has not made any decisions.

Sierra Club-CRA endorse Hekhuis and Russell

THE LOCAL chapter of the Sierra Club and the Carmel Residents Association have separately announced endorsements for Dale Hekhuis and Bob Russell for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board.

The Sierra Club announcement states that the decision was made based on the candidates' knowledge and positions on water issues, sensitivity to the environment and electability.

The announcement cites Hekhuis' and Russell's participation in the petition drive to limit water meter connection. Both are environmentally sensitive candidates, it adds.

The CRA said that Hekhuis and Russell have called for a new dam or reservoir, restraint on current unlimited growth in new water meter hookups, faster development of intermediate term water supply projects and preventing short-term overpumping.

It also cites their work on the petition drive to limit water meter hookups.

Seniors program needs participants

Carmel Police Department's "Seniors Helping Seniors" program has need for two types of seniors: those who would like to help and those who desire help.

According to Cathy Dampier, desk officer, there are seniors who are looking for some type of community involvement to donate their time and others who are lonely, "shut-ins," or are "at-risk" due to medical or physical reasons and desire contact with someone who cares about their welfare.

Under the program, senior volunteers call participants of the program by telephone from the Carmel Police Department. If for some reason the recipient doesn't answer the phone, the volunteer alerts the police dispatcher and a patrol unit is sent to check on the participant's welfare. To be effective, calls are made at about the same time every day, Dampier said, but the seniors aren't restricted to their homes.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer or a recipient of the "Seniors Helping Seniors" program is encouraged to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

A Prayer For Parents

Carmel Pine Cone
Oct. 25, 1979

O Lord, some one said that the children of today have bad manners, "contempt for authority, disrespect for their elders and they are tyrants." This observation was made by the Greek philosopher Socrates before he drank his hemlock martini over 2,500 years ago.

Remembering isometric exercise, we recognize that children mature by testing themselves against limits set by loving adults, who are neither authoritarian nor permissive. Children need warmly firm parents upon whom they can model themselves while groping for emancipation.

It takes great restraint and wisdom and God's helping hand to be a good parent. While some youth are going to pot and others are abandoning their parents and their moral principles, may we stand firm in ours. May we remember not to cross a bridge until we are sure one is there.

Finally, there is a sign in an optometrist shop window which must contain a lesson for us, O Lord. If you don't see what you want you've come to the right place.

Many seniors need to earn money to supplement Social Security benefits and should be aware of the effects extra income can have on those benefits. In some cases, a Social Security recipient loses one dollar in benefits for every two earned above $6,800; must pay income taxes on up to half of the benefits if total income (for a single person) exceeds $25,000 a year; faces an assessment, according to income, to pay for Medicare's new catastrophic health insurance; and must pay a social security tax of more than 13 percent of net earnings if working as a self-employed "consultant" or "free-lancer."

A few days later Justice Brennan heard that retired Chief Justice Warren Burger was in a hospital with pneumonia. He phoned and advised: "Warren, you better get out of there. If they think you have pneumonia, they'll take out your gallbladder."

County devises own erosion plan for controversial Murphy grading

By DAVID LELAND

COUNTY ZONING Administrator Dale Ellis has answered John Murphy's emergency erosion control plan with one of his own.

The latest document is an effort by the county to shore up the roads on the Little Horse Ranch Ltd., located in the hills south of Carmel Valley, where the district attorney's office alleges that Murphy's illegal grading project left the land unstable and liable to slide into several creeks below.

"As with any applicant, it's now up to him to decide if he wants to use the permit," said

Ellis of the 26-page document. "At this level we can't mandate that he do the work."

On Oct. 17, EMC Planning Group Inc. submitted a four-paragrah, one-page application for a coastal development permit, which drew criticism from the state Coastal Commission, attorney general's office and county staff.

And while there is no time limit attached to the permit, which carries a fee, as to when work should begin, a public hearing has been scheduled for 1:30 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 7 in Monterey County Superior Court, at which time the erosion control plan could be mandated by the court.

Susan Dauphine, an attorney representing Murphy, was not available at press time to comment on whether her client would act on the erosion control plan.

Specifically, the county's plan provides for the removal of sidecast material to environmentally safe sites. Plus, the work is to be overseen by an independent agent who is knowledgeable in geology, erosion control, hydrology, vegetation removal, seeding and replanting.

The alleged work by Murphy has been called the largest land-use violation in Monterey County history by some observers. With that in mind, critics have accused the DA's office and county of foot-dragging.

But Ellis said the slow-moving process has been necessary.

"It's been without question one of the most difficult things we've (county) ever dealt with — it's new territory," he said. "It's slow and it's frustrating, but it's due process."

While the erosion control plan is in the forefront of the public eye, it is merely the beginning of what promises to be a lengthy court case.

Deputy District Attorney Morgan Taylor said it may take years before the legalities of the lawsuit are worked out in a court of law.

Radio dramatists given boost via Ars Poetica telecasts

By ANNE PAPINEAU

NURTURING local writers and performers via an "acoustic stage" is the mission of Ars Poetica, a weekly show broadcast over Pacific Grove-based radio station KAZU 90.3 FM.

The Ars Poetica staff is putting out a call for local playwrights to submit original, one-hour radio dramas to be staged during future broadcasts.

"This is an opportunity for writers, poets and storytellers," says John Dotson, who has moderated Ars Poetica since its launching nearly six years ago. "Those who are poets, or have scripts and script ideas, we invite you to come forward so we can develop these concepts with the tools that are available on radio production, such as background music, sound effects and electronic processes."

Ars Poetica airs 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesdays over the public-supported radio station. Broadcaster Barbara Rose Shuler invited Dotson to assume programming chores for the program, since he shared an enthusiasm not only for radio but also for poetry.

"The emphasis from the start has been on performing rather than discussing poetry," observes Dotson, who was the first poet-in-residence for the Tor House Foundation. He is currently a teacher and dean of faculty at Santa Catalina School. "My philosophy has always been that poets speak best in poems, so let the poets speak through their poetry."

During its more than 200 broadcasts, Ars Poetica has featured spoken tributes to many noted poets, among them Robinson Jeffers, Walt Whitman and Edith Sitwell. But it has also provided a forum for locals, including poets John Schatz, Taelen Thomas and Vera Scutt Taicher.

This year, Mose Fadeem joined the KAZU family, delivering his program, "The Fanatic Gardener."

"At the same time I suggested we initiate a program to do live drama," Fadeem explains. "Then John and I got together. We started off the program with a play of my own."

Drama again takes the spotlight on Tuesday, Nov. 7. At that time, Ars Poetica will broadcast Mistress Bearberry and Lovers. Jack Curtis of Big Sur adapted his short story for radio use.

Fadeem describes it as "An environmentally themed piece that reaches beyond cultural distinctions. The word is strongest when you can only hear it."

Dotson also affirms "The power of acoustic space. The eye takes things apart and the ear pulls them together. All we have to do to create an infinite array of visual settings is to close our eyes and open our ears."

The poet encountered these theories during his studies of the communications theorist and educator Marshall McLuhan, of whom he is "very much a disciple."

"In my own work," Fadeem asserts, "I construct dramatic pieces out of the use of language, rather than action or plot. Its primarily the weight of the word that still interests, and radio to me is the perfect medium."

Writers are encouraged to take advantage of this unusual, auditory showcase.

"I've gotten some calls from performers, but really we need persons or groups who can come up with original material," Fadeem says.

"Rehearsal time is limited," Dotson adds. "There's an improvisational character about it. KAZU is a community radio station, and completing the sixth year of the program, we're certainly eager to sustain it as a medium for radio dramatists, poets and storytellers."

This forum resembles the roots of poetry, the oral tradition in which pieces were not written, but spoken.

"We want to make this available, to bring in good energy," explains Dotson. "We believe the community should have an outlet for these voices."

Scripts or suggestions should be submitted to Ars Poetica at KAZU. The address is P.O. Box 206, Pacific Grove, CA 93950. Or for more information, call 375-7275.

MOZE FADEEM, left, and John Dotson, who each host their own programs on radio station KAZU, encourage local writers to

Cole Weston will speak of 'Carmel As It Was'

COLE WESTON, photographer and theater director, will discuss "Carmel As It Was" during the Fall Literary Tea sponsored by the Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library. Admission is free to the tea, which begins at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 5.

Weston learned the art of photography from his father, master lensman Edward Weston, and from his brother, Brett, also prominent in the field.

Cole Weston attended the Cornish School in Seattle, where he studied theater, directing, staging and ballet.

Weston now makes his home in Garrapata, south of Carmel. He travels widely, leading many workshops on photography around the world.

He has directed numerous plays at the historic Outdoor Forest Theater, including Moon for the Misbegotten, Winterset and Of Mice and Men.

Sunday's tea is presented at Harrison Memorial Library, Ocean Avenue at Lincoln Street, Carmel. Refreshments will be served.

Alvin Ailey ensemble will dance

THE ALVIN AILEY Repertory Ensemble will present a performance at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 9 in Sunset Theater, Carmel.

In 1974, Alvin Ailey formed a workshop composed of hand-picked scholarship students from his American Dance Center. Under the artistic direction of Sylvia Waters (formerly an Ailey principal dancer), the Repertory Ensemble has become a cohesive organization of artists and a new dance company that is an acclaimed performing ensemble. It has drawn critical and popular acclaim in both large cities and small towns across the country.

The ensemble repertoire includes works by such choreographers as Donald McKayle, Talley Beatty and Ailey himself.

The company includes among its credits the production of five original ballets as its contribution to the Ailey Celebrates Ellington that took place in 1976 at Lincoln Center's New York State Theater. The ensemble has also performed as guest company during the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater's New York City Center season, and in Pepisco's Summerfare '84 production of The Emperor Jones. This will be the third visit of this company to Carmel. Sunset Theater is on San Carlos at Ninth Avenue.

Tickets for the performance are $12.50 and $10 and are available at Sunset Center or Center Stage Ticketing. For reservations or for more information call 624-3996 or 649-5561.

BILL GORNELL choreographed "Colony," part of the repertoire of the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble. Dancers are, from left,

Andre Tyson, Wayne Barbaste and Rodney Nugent. The ensemble will perform Thursday, Nov. 9 in Sunset Theater, Carmel. Tickets are $12.50 and $10.

William Giles interprets world with camera and light

GERRIT BEVELANDER'S Trio, a monoprint, is among the artist's works featured in the Lobby Gallery of the Cherry Foundation. A reception for the artist is set 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 5. The Cherry Foundation is on Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel.

Gerrit Bevelander's paintings exhibited at Cherry Foundation

AN EXHIBIT showcasing recent monoprints by Carmel artist Gerrit Bevelander will open Saturday, Nov. 4 in the Cherry Foundation's Lobby Gallery.

Beginning with the formal poses of live models as a starting point, Bevelander creates a synthesis of figure painting and bold abstractions by employing acrylic paint on glass from which one print is achieved.

Bevelander consistently mines his idiom for bold effects that suggest modern as well as classical Greek paintings.

A retired biologist, Bevelander studied painting with Moses Soyer in New York City before coming to California. He has since studied with George DeGroat, Jean Fosnot and Dick Crispo. In recent years, Bevelander has shown his watercolors, oil paintings and acrylics in group shows throughout the Monterey Peninsula.

A reception for the artist will be held at the foundation from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 4. The exhibit will continue through Nov. 25.

The Cherry Foundation is located at the corner of Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. The gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

arranged a travel-study trip to Greece for himself and his students.

"That was 1968, the year of the assassinations," Giles remembers. "I wanted to go to Crete, the meeting ground of East and West. I went with my wife and first-born. It seems we were living in real climactic times. The people of Crete cried when Bobby Kennedy died."

Those four months abroad were "the highlight of my students' education. The students we took were filmmakers, photographers, poets and writers. The students all came back with different stories, as we carried the university out into the open world."

Although a long-time teacher of photography and one who continues to lead workshops, Giles maintains an unorthodox attitude toward his subject.

"Nobody knows anything about photography. People think it's about taking pictures. It's not. It's about feeling," he observes. "You've got to be still to take a still. To see something eternal, you have to slow down a bit."

As a working artist, Giles peppers his day with that very stillness he needs to make a photograph.

"I'm taking care of a flock of sheep for a friend. With the animals, I sometimes wonder who's in charge. It's so beautiful out there. I leave the darkroom, smell the sheep, and go back to the darkroom," Giles says of his day. "It's important for me to be centered."

Giles plots his thoughts and plans in journals. There is always one in progress. He is at work on his 301st. His voiced thoughts often resemble insights recorded into a daybook.

"The 20th century human is up against it. We moved into the electro-magnetic world, and we're hardly capable of dealing with water, much less fire," he states. "Maybe the human animal isn't as barbarous as the news media portrays. I think the worthy news that lasts is when the simple folk are made into heroes in spite of themselves."

"Why don't we put dollars into what really brings out the best in people?" he queries. "We reward what's fast. I feel under my white skin very Indian."

Giles perceives Carmel Valley as "a healing place." In 1982 he moved to New York City, where he collaborated on a video documentary. He also created a series of manipulated Polaroid works.

More recently, he lived and worked in Los Angeles, teaching at Otis/Parsons and Cal State San Bernardino. In 1987, his photographs filled both floors of the Long Beach Museum of Art.

At present, his attentions are turned to the Kazantzakis tribute at the Cherry Foundation. Giles corresponds with Kazantzakis' widow, Elani, who wrote, "If Nikos had a camera, this is what he would see."

— William Giles

"The Cherry exhibit shows that people with nothing have everything," he observes.

"I think the Carmel Valley is very wholesome; it's very holy," he adds. "It's hard to create art here in a way, because you need some of the abrasion of a more urban area. Artists have a duty to their community to realize their imagery, and then the community can yea or nay it."

"In the Spirit of Nikos Kazantzakis" will be teamed with a selection of monotypes by Gerrit Bevelander at the Cherry Foundation, Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel. A reception for the artists is set 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 4.

Giles will provide a seminar and slide show on "The Cretan Experience" at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 17, also at Cherry Hall. For more information, call 624-7491.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin'

Zukerman surveyed flute literature

THE RENOWNED flutist Eugenia Zukerman was featured in recital by the Carmel Music Society in Sunset Auditorium last week. In a program which came close to presenting a survey of the literature for her instrument and even included compositions by the man who developed the modern flute mechanism, Ms. Zukerman was a most appealing performer. Pianist Dennis Helmrich was the superior accompanist and collaborator who provided solid support in much widely varied and difficult music.

Once again there were no program notes, giving the artist an opportunity to make amusing and enlightening comments on the music to be performed. First there was the "Flute Sonata No. 2 in D Minor" by Frederick the Great who was that most unusual combination of Prussian despot, passionate musician and elegant composer. The first movement was like an extended operatic recitative, full of deceptive cadences punctuating long musical sentences. The second movement was the aria, replete with frills, trills and the musical formulas of the late Baroque. The third movement was a vivacious fugue, played lightly and gracefully. However, the tone was frequently breathy, particularly in the lower register, which did not have the same quality as her upper one.

It seems it was the fashion in the mid-19th century to write variations on popular songs and Theobald Boehm, who perfected the modern flute, arranged three Schubert Lieder, possibly to highlight his invention. These gave the artist a chance to display great finger dexterity and airy tone, though here too the sound of the lower register was less pleasing.

A "Sonatina" written in 1948 by the American composer Eldin Burton suited the artist much better. The Debussyque themes and dramatic shifts demanded flexibility, sensitivity and a cool sound and this was all very well encompassed. Since the flute part lies high on the instrument and since Ms. Zukerman seemed to have hit her stride in this gently modern music, it was a pleasing rendition.

We were told that C.P.E. Bach worked for 27 years as composer and accompanist for Frederick the Great and had trouble with his boss for whom he wrote rather perfunctory music, but the "Sonata in A Minor for Solo Flute" is not of that ilk. The performance of this demanding work was polished and proficient, but seldom dipped very far beneath the surface of the notes.

On the other hand, the playing of "Le Merle Noir" by Olivier Messien which he based on a study of taped birdsongs, was compelling. The flute was an uncanny reproduction of avian voices and Ms. Zukerman projected warmth, involvement and much depth.

Two works by famed 19th century flute virtuosi and pedagogues rounded out the program. The "Andante Pastoral and Scherzettino" by the French master Paul Taffanel was delightful high-class salon music. It is ingratiating and elegant and the playing matched it very well. This was also true of the "Hungarian Pastoral Fantasy" pp. 26 by Franz Doppler who came from a long line of musicians and who composed and conducted first in Hungary and later in Vienna. The artist captured the Lisztian Hungarian gypsy style with its florid decorations, finger twisting leaps and extravagant variations, with clarity and brilliance. The tone was warm and large here and stylistically it was a triumph for her.

As encores in response to the warm applause, Ms. Zukerman played "Clair de Lune" by Debussy and a piece which she said "lasted one minute and 37 seconds by K. Anderson about whom I know nothing." She made it sound like dancing hummingbirds.

Shop the Farmers' Market

Fresh vegetables and fruit sold by the farmers who grew them are the feature of the Farmers' Market. The market is in operation 2:30 to 6 p.m. Thursdays at Monterey Peninsula College and 8 a.m. to noon Sundays at Hartnell College in Salinas.

A variety of local produce is available at the market, including fresh vegetables, fruit, nuts, honey, mushrooms, sprouts, flowers, nursery stock, dried fruit and eggs.

For further information, call 423-7308.

Bring own water to Molera Park

Drinking or potable water is no longer available in the Andrew Molera State Park, located on the Big Sur Coast.

In the past, potable water was provided by "water buffaloes." The old military metal water tanks on wheels no longer meet state health standards for drinking water and have been removed from the park.

Campers and day users should plan on bringing their own drinking water. Drinking water is available at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park and Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park.

For further information, contact the Big Sur District Office at 667-2315.

While Carmel still has few street lights outside the business district, there were none at all in the early days. Residents out at night used to find their way with a peculiarly local lantern made of a punctured soup can with a candle fastened inside.

Shanghai String Quartet to perform diverse program

THE SHANGHAI String Quartet will perform at Sunset Theater in Carmel at 8 p.m. The concert is presented by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula. The quartet, composed of Wei-Gang Li, violin; Hong-Gang Li, violin; Zheng Wang, viola, and Kathy Jarka, cello, will play Beethoven's String quartet in F Major, Op. 18, No. 1; Zhou Long's Song of the Ch'in; and Brahms' String Quartet in C Minor, Op. 51, No. 1.

Formed in 1983 at the Shanghai Conservatory, the Shanghai Quartet was selected to represent China at the Portsmouth International String Quartet Competition where they won second prize. Subsequently the quartet continued their studies in the United States with the Vermeer Quartet, the Tokyo Quartet and as graduate ensemble-in-residence at the Juilliard School. They are now the quartet-in-residence at the University of Richmond.

In 1987, the Shanghai Quartet gave its New York debut at Town Hall and was hailed as "among the finest young foursome of the day" by critic John Rockwell of the New York Times. Later in 1987 the quartet won first prize in the Chicago Discovery Competition hosted by Chamber Music Chicago. Their '88/'89 concert tour consisted of more than 55 concerts in 25 states, including their debut in New York's Kaufmann Concert Hall. This season they will appear in Alice Tully Hall on the Great Performers Series.

Wei-Gang Li, violin, began his studies with his father at the age of 5. In 1981 he studied at the San Francisco Conservatory through a sister city exchange program. He graduated from the Shanghai Conservatory in 1985, and has been a soloist with the Shanghai Conservatory Orchestra, the Shanghai Symphony and the BBC Symphony Orchestra. Li was featured in the film "From Mao to Mozart" with Isaac Stern.

Hong-Gang Li, violin, began his studies at the same time as his brother. When the Beijing Conservatory reopened in 1977 after the Cultural revolution, Li was selected from a group of more than 500 applicants. He continued his training at the Shanghai Conservatory and remained there as a teaching assistant after his graduation in 1985. He has appeared as a soloist with the Shanghai Philharmonic and the Shanghai Conservatory Orchestra.

Zheng Wang, viola, was born in Shanghai in 1960, the son of professional musicians. He began violin studies with his mother at the age of 10, changed to viola at 16. He was a member of the Nanking Opera Orchestra until he entered the Shanghai Conservatory in 1981. He has been a soloist with the Shanghai Conservatory Orchestra and has participated in master classes of violists John Graham and Milton Katims during their visits to China.

Kathe Jarka, cello, is the newest member

JAZZ TIDES

Hub and hearth

JUST AS I take up this notebook, the low growl that precedes an aftershock comes past the sun-washed window panes. The tremor hits and holds for five lengthened seconds. One of many hundreds since the big quake — and not commonplace. We all will require months and countless conversations before the massive event has been mythologized by our complex and ancient survival sense.

That said, I must put aside the pen and go stare at low hills thick with healthy trees. These subjects — death, broken cities, folks huddling for warmth, the gradual comeback — seem too large. No quick takes. Only plain lingo will suffice.

Jazz vocalist Kitty Margolis was brave. With show cancellations happening quicker than winks throughout the quake area, she arrived from San Francisco and did her Monterey Bay Club gig. The room was hub and hearth. Its crowd shared these things: fright, hope, bright tunes, much fellowship, news of friends at battered places.

Before the first set, Kitty sat and trembled. "I was outside my (North Beach) apartment when it happened. The sidewalk rolled under my feet — like surfing. Music's a great healer. I thought maybe I could give something. Besides (smiling a little), the power was out. What should I do — sit home in the dark?"

Her special love's the Santa Cruz futurist Alfonso Montouri. His residence was trashed. He spent one night with John and Linda Knipe at their Soquel winery (where fine monthly mailing-list jazz events occur) and then drove up to be with Kitty. The Knipe home sustained major damage. "The piano's okay," Alfonso said. "Maybe some programming delay, but they'll pick up the pieces and continue that series."

Superb pianist Dick Hindman couldn't make the gig as planned. His Capitola rental unit now held shattered items everywhere. He and wife Cathy were staying with relatives in Sacramento. ("We have to leave that building," Dick said next day over the long-distance wire. "It's on a cliff. We lost every breakable. Fortunately, the piano survived. I have Monterey Bay Club jobs coming up — I'll see you soon. I don't know where we'll go.")

Kitty learned about Dick's dilemma an hour and a half before her scheduled start. Emergency call. Enter Ed Mendenhall, teenage pro who'd studied with Hindman. Ed made it through without ever having worked for Kitty or seen the charts. Drummer Vince Lateano supported the vocalist and pianist brilliantly — in a witty, offhand manner that called no special attention to himself. Bassist John Wiitala was both lyrical and solid as stone. (Quiet comments indicated that some listeners submerged the earthquake horrors — however briefly — by rooting for young Ed. He attends Robert Louis Stevenson School and couldn't stay in the bar when not up on the stand.)

"I'm glad you're here," Miss Margolis told the audience. She scatted occasionally. Most treatments were pure and simple, granting us generous doses of her rich, lovely sound. Outer tragedy makes for inner gratitude: she did tributes recalling Billie Holiday, Irene Kral, Etta Jones. Another song was dedicated to Dick Hindman. (Vocalist Madeline Eastman works the same venue on Thursday night 11/2 — and Dick usually works with her.)

Bassist Bryan McConnell gigs with John Handy and so keeps places in Carmel and San Francisco. Between sets: "I was six blocks from the burning Marina District. Scared the stuff outta me."

Room manager Teri Waros contributed that she'd finally got a phone call through jammed lines to Aptos jazz pianist Smith Dobson and vocalist wife Gail. "The family's all right," Teri said. "That's all I know. That's enough."

Vince lives on San Francisco's Potrero Hill. "It's granite," he noted. "There was lots of broken glass. No structural damage, though." He said he got calls from London (British reedman Bill Skeat who played the last Monterey Jazz Festival) and Ohio (on-the-road MJF Music Director Bill Berry).

Festival staffer David Murray said October's board meeting was cancelled. (Still in town for the session that didn't happen, Jimmy Lyons said over the phone next afternoon that he and wife Laurel were just fine. Their apartment's not far from Kitty's.)

And the singer sang and gave us a reason to be there. Together. Remembering what jazz-based community means.

OVER THE NEXT half dozen nights, Monterey Bay Club regulars will appear. Info: 649-4234. Smith Dobson's slated to work beside guitarist Larry Scala (11/9); Smith and Gail a bit later (11/16). Other action:

• Music, dancing, food, door prizes. Monterey Bay Blues Festival announces a holiday bash this month (11/25) at Seaside's Oldemeyer Center. Knockout singer Sarah Livingston and the Bobby Reed Band.

Donation: $14 per at the door or $12 beforehand. Advance treatment may be arranged by dialing Royal Barber Shop (394-7600), Durley Electronics (394-8304), Dorothy's House of Beauty (394-9523). Proceeds will help promote the non-profit fest.

• I'll read from my new book of short stories on Wednesday evening (11/8) at Barbara Murphy's Portofino Cafe. Reedman John Cortes says he'll bring by his horns and a musician friend to play behind the words; the words say things about the late jazz vocalist Carol Mildon and how the music passes from generation to generation. It's $3 at the door (reader's cut going into earthquake relief) with an eight o'clock start. Portofino's downstairs in Pacific Grove Plaza — 620 Lighthouse.

• Singer Wies Norberg partners up with pianist B.J. Smith on Friday and Saturday nights at Express D'Orient in Carmel's Crossroads Center. Supper club atmosphere and "standards in jazzy fashion," says Wies. Reservations for dinner via 625-1002.

• Also The Crossroads. Cancun Restaurant now books live jazz, blues, reggae. Friday and Saturday evenings — 625-3030.

SANTA CRUZ update. Kuumbwa Jazz Center's a short shout (about one block) from quake-hammered Pacific Garden Mall. That's where street musicians used to wander: where people died and so many businesses were damaged or destroyed.

Kuumbwa Development Director Judith Broadhurst says losses at the non-profit venue amounted to "broken glassware and bottles of wine." The facility was roped off for several days. City inspectors now have judged it safe for public presentations.

Experts estimate that one-third of the downtown area must be demolished and rebuilt. With this economic challenge widely known and understood, Kuumbwa will go ahead on. Praises be. "Volunteers started showing up," Judith adds, "before the official reopening."

The previously-announced Membership Appreciation Party will happen Friday night (11/3). Refreshments and wondrous jazz writer Al Young reading from his work while pianist Graham Connah and bassist Stan Poplin play. No charge for current members — the $10 door fee paid by others will apply to new memberships extending through 1990.

However, the Jazz Auction shan't be part of that evening. Miss Broadhurst: "Time got short. We may put it off for some months. (Pianist) Les McCann contributed an original painting worth $1,000. We'll let your readers know when."

Then November's bookings were told all at once. Coming in Monday night (11/6) will be New York Voices. The hot young vocal group — Darmon Meader, Caprice Fox, Kim Nazarian, Sara Krieger, Peter Eldridge — has won excellent reviews on the East Coast. Eight o'clock kick and $11 apiece. Center Stage Ticketing.

Remaining Monday nights: Max Roach Double Quartet (strings added — 11/13). Vocalist Rebecca Paris (11/20). McCann plus tenorman Eddie Harris (11/27). More on each date as it nears.

Judith says Kuumbwa honcho Tim Jackson's household suffered no tragic damage and that "we feel hopeful" about the future. She lives in Boulder Creek. "Right across the road, houses were smashed and pushed down the mountain. My home didn't fall over."

Later, Santa Cruz saxist Paul Contos gave this report: "My family's safe. The chimney toppled — inspectors say it has to be pulled out completely and rebuilt." Friends of theirs said Santa Cruz pianist John Donaldson and his wife and the youngsters were doing fine.

Elsewhere on the quake front, John Cortes finally reached Oakland resident Dan Seamans — new bassist with the Cortes group. That city logged scores of deaths and fallen dwellings. "He's alive and well," John said. "The guys will get together and sign a management contract with Tup Lohse." Miss Lohse handles singer Scotty Wright, bassist Ray Drummond, local flutist Kenny Stahl. John Donaldson and drummer Dan Sabanovich round out the Cortes unit.

Los Gatos officials counted 30 collapsed buildings. Painter Bruni Sablan — she specializes in jazz portraits and has many friends hereabouts — says her Old Town studio's intact. "Everything was tossed upside down, flying around us (Bruni, assistant Mark Gray). The gallery looks good; my father's a structural engineer and will check it out. I've never been through anything that scary."

RUSSIAN-BORN pianist Shura Cherkassky will perform Sunday, Nov. 5 as part of the Keyboard Artist Series. Cherkassky substitutes for the ailing Jorge Bolet. The 4 p.m. concert is scheduled to include works by Handel, Weber, Chopin, Berg, Stockhausen and Strauss. For ticket information, call 624-7971.

Cherkassky concertizes Sunday

ON SUNDAY, Nov. 5, at 4 p.m. Keyboard Artist Series will present, as a substitute for the ailing Jorge Bolet, Shura Cherkassky, one of the last of the great post-Romantic master pianists.

Said the New York Times last May, "This gifted man is especially valuable to us because he can tell us first hand about a previous age of pianism... Through him, the distant world from which he emerged is there for us to hear."

A native of Odessa, Russia, his debut in 1923 with Walter Damrosch and the New York Philharmonic was one of the season's sensations and resulted in a command performance at the White House for President Warren G. Harding.

In November, in addition to his appearance in Carmel, Cherkassky will give recitals at Ambassador Auditorium in Pasadena, Symphony Hall in Boston, The Academy of Music in Philadelphia and Carnegie Hall.

His Program in Carmel will consist of Handel's Harmonious Blacksmith; Weber's Sonata No. 4 in E Minor; Chopin's Sonata No. 2 in B-flat minor; Alban Berg's Sonata, Opus 1; Stockhausen's Klavierstueck IX and the Schultz-Evler transcription of the Blues Danube Waltz by Johann Strauss.

A limited number of tickets, priced from $11 to $20, are available by calling Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561 or can be purchased at the Sunset Center box office on the afternoon of the performance. For further information call Keyboard Artist Series at 624-7971.

Historical society will exhibit elegant gowns of yesterday

ELEGANT GOWNS of satin, velvet, lace and silk brocade will be displayed Nov. 4 to 12, at the Estrada Adobe by the Monterey History and Art Association's Costume Committee. The exhibition will showcase evening gowns dating from the 1870s to the 1950s that are part of the association's extensive Costume Collection.

The "Elegant Evenings" show will open Saturday, Nov. 4 with a champagne reception from 2 to 4 p.m. in honor of the donors of the evening wear on display. Among the honorees will be Jane Kramer, who has donated many designer dresses to the association, and Mrs. James Boyd, who has contributed a gown she bought to wear to the inauguration of the Duke of Gloucester as governor of Australia in 1940 (the ceremony, alas, was later cancelled because of the war!). Other donors include Mrs. William Chapman, Margaret Deinelt, Amelie Elkinton, Dorothy Frost, Dorothy Halloran, Virginia Land, Jerry Longstreth, Susan Resendez, Ann Rotter, Olga Scheffler, Helen Samborn and Pauline Stanley.

The earliest gown, of purple velvet and cream-colored satin with sleeves of handmade lace, was made around 1878 to fit a tiny woman with a 17-inch waist. There will also be a flapper dress from the roaring '20s, beaded gowns from the '30s, and short summer evening dresses from the '50s, as well as accessories such as evening coats, shoes and purses. The gowns will be displayed in vignettes with appropriate furnishings provided by Richard Summerscales Antiques. The period hairstyles for the mannequins will be done by Vicki Zentner and Nancy Venn.

The Estrada Adobe is part of Coast Savings, 449 Alvarado St., Monterey; the entrance is on Tyler Street. The exhibition will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily Nov. 5 through Nov. 12. Admission is $2.

The Costume collection, which is maintained by the committee at Pacific House in Monterey, is made up of clothing for men, women and children, as well as textiles and accessories that have been donated over the past 40 years to the History and Art Association. Its particular focus is on clothing pertaining to California and the Monterey Peninsula.

Poetry competition seeks submissions

Local poets are invited to submit a poem to The Poetry Center's new fall contest.

There is no entry fee and the contest is open to all amateur poets.

The poem judged best wins the $1,000 grand prize. Fifty additional winners will be chosen for a total value of $2,500.

Selected entries are also considered for publication in

The Center's new poetry anthology, Paths Less Traveled.

Poems may be on any subject and in any style, traditional or modern. Age or previous writing experience is not important.

"We have had winners of all ages," said Will Stratford, senior editor. "One of our recent grand prize winners was 17 at the time and in high school. Many entries are from older writers expressing life's experiences in poetry."

Originality, sincerity, freshness and vitality are considered by the judges.

To enter, poets should send only one poem of 20 lines or less to The Poetry Center Fall Contest, 120 Village Square, Suite 100N, Orinda, CA 94563. No entries will be returned.

Train buffs can view model railroads

WHOMONG us has not waved at some time to the engineer at the throttle of a train? How are your memories of the mournful wail of a steam whistle in the dead of night? Now all that is heard is the sound from an air horn whistle.

Gourmet Gala draws culinary stars

SOME OF the most prestigious names in food and wine have agreed to judge the dishes prepared by the celebrity chefs at the 1990 March of Dimes Gourmet Gala, set Jan. 20 in the San Carlos Ballroom of the Monterey Sheraton.

says Linda Lamb, head of the kitchen design committee.

Sponsors for this year's gala are Monterey Rolls Royce, Mills Distributing Co., Saks Fifth Avenue; Morse and Associates and Financial Center Mortgage; The Nunes Co. Inc.; Household Card Services; Country Home Care; elan at Pebble Beach; Stahl Motor Co.; Pebble Beach Resorts and Rykoff Sexton.

Artie Erly will serve as chairman of the Gala for the fifth consecutive year.

Other committee chairmen are Kay Nunez and Bill Cater, development; Charlene Etienne, celebrities; Mark and Jenifer Lupo, hospitality; Don Ferch, Tracy and Pat Gentry and James Watson, cooking; Linda Lamb, kitchen design; Carol Benton, entertainment; Mary Alice Cerrito, invitation, reservations, printing and program; Tia Gindick, publicity; Sherrie McCullough, silent auction.

The event, which this year netted $60,000 for the March of Dimes research and services, puts an eclectic collection of celebrity cooks into 12 environments created by local interior designers and architects.

During a cocktail reception provided by the peninsula's top restaurants and wineries, the cooks cook, the traditionally sell-out (at $150 per person) crowd observes, and the panel of celebrity judges judge. Dinner — the 12 celebrity recipes as prepared in larger quantities in the Monterey Sheraton kitchen — and dancing follow.

The March of Dimes, now in its 51st year, is a partnership of volunteers and professionals which has pioneered programs that include diagnosis and treatment of babies before and after birth, genetic counseling, and early and regular prenatal care to prevent birth defects.

Multiple media assembled for new PG Art Center exhibitions

EXHIBITIONS OPENING Friday, Nov. 3 at the Pacific Grove Art Center include 65 images by Women in Photography International, "Outer Space Paintings" by Carol Star Safer, "Works and Words on Paper" by Carolyn Berry and black and white photographs by David Williams III.

The opening reception will take place 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 3 at the art center, located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove. Admission is free. The center is open noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

These exhibitions will remain on display through Dec. 9.

Women in Photography International has assembled 65 images from women around the world, selected from nearly 1,000 entries. Jurors Val Williams of London, England, Bonnie Donohue of Cambridge, Mass. and Phyllis Peet of Aptos selected photographs by commercial, editorial and fine art photographers.

Women in Photography is an international non-profit educational organization based in Los Angeles. Following this inaugural show, the collection will move from the Pacific Grove Art Center to galleries and photographic centers, touring through 1990 to such venues as the Portland Museum of Art in Maine, the Royal Photographic Society in Great Britain and the Photographic Center Northwest in Seattle.

"Works and Words on Paper" is a collection of books, watercolors and collages by Carolyn Berry, and will be featured in the Hall Galleries of the art center.

Berry's books combine words and shapes inspired by the poems of Anna Akhmatova, who was born a century ago. Berry's work is included in numerous private and public collections around the world, including the Art Institute of Chicago School Library, the Museum of Modern Art Library, King Steven Museum in Hungary and the National Institute of Design in India. Santa Cruz artist Carol Star Safer creates "Outer Space Paintings." Her depictions of earthscapes, moonscapes and the planet Jupiter are based on NASA photographs. They range in size from 18-by-24-inches to 4-by-8 feet.

Safer's paintings are included in the permanent collection of the National Air and Space Museum at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., and the Cosmonaut Museum in Moscow.

Using clear casting resins resulted in a lung condition that required Safer to discontinue that medium. She describes her work as a merger of art, science and Eastern mysticism. She also works in Chinese brushstroke painting and Japanese sumi-e. During the early 1950s she was a student of Fernand Leger and Ossip Zadkine in Paris.

"Persons, Places and Things" is the title of the one-man show of photographs by David Williams III.

The general theme of the artist's work expresses his response to form and detail. Recurring motifs are the nude, details of old structures and other elements which allude to mortality and the passing of time. The artist says he has been influenced by Lee Friedlander; Walker Evans; Henry Wessel, Jr., and Imogen Cunningham.

This show is the first public exhibition of Williams' work since returning to the Monterey Peninsula in 1986. Previously he lived and worked in New York City as both a fine art and commercial photographer. He was also a teaching assistant for Cheri Hiser at Anderson Ranch Art Center in Colorado. Williams was general liaison for Ansel Adams' 1978 Yosemite Workshop. His work was included in a Queens, N.Y. exhibition curated by Dore Ashton in 1983.

Williams graduated from the Los Angeles Art Center in 1974 and became the senior darkroom supervisor at Monterey Peninsula College under the direction of Roger Fremier. He developed and taught an advanced photographic course which incorporated color photocopies, sculpture and sequential imagery.

For additional information about these exhibits, contact the Pacific Grove Art Center at 375-2208.

DAVID WILLIAMS' black and white photographs of "People, Places and Things" are featured at the Pacific Grove Art Center

Heroes in our midst

A ONE-MAN historical play about Father Damien, the 19th century Belgian-born priest who worked and died among the lepers of Molokai, Hawaii, is now onstage at Cherry Hall in Carmel-by-the-Sea. The play was written by Aldyth Morris.

Born Joseph de Verster in Tremelo, Belgium, Jan. 3, 1840, the man now known as "Father Damien of Molokai" came to Hawaii at the age of 23 as a replacement for an older brother who had become seriously ill. Ordained the next year, 1864, he worked at routine priestly chores for the first nine years of his ministry.

But in 1873, deeply moved and outraged by the miserable conditions under which lepers dumped by the Hawaiian government on Molokai were forced to live, the young priest volunteered to minister to them. There until his own death from leprosy in 1889, Father Damien served as pastor, physician, friend and advocate to this colony of the islands' outcasts.

"I found 1,000 lepers. No doctors. No nurses. No resident police. No government. No hope." Thus does Damien describe the scene at Kalaupapa, Molokai, as it was when he arrived in 1873.

The current Carmel production, directed by Nick Zanides who has a history of bringing such thought-provoking plays to local audiences, lets us inside the heart and soul of the kind of human being who would struggle and prevail under such frustrating conditions. Remarkably, we are made to see ourselves in him as well.

"This is my cathedral," Damien (Ron Genauer) announces simply at the start of the play, gesturing at the wooden chapel from which he dispensed divine compassion and human hope for the last 16 years of his life to the outcasts of Molokai. But this is no prefabricated hero, no goody-goody holy man. He is, instead, vulnerable, needful, contradictory and complex. He explodes in anger at the inept, foot-dragging authorities who are supposed to provide food and housing to the lepers. He agonizes that his rough, unpolished manners antagonize those whose help he solicits. He confesses to constant loneliness, self-doubt and an unsatisfied hunger for the sexual companionship forbidden by his priestly celibacy. Rooted in his religion strength, he endures.

Ron Genauer is superb in the role. His husky, low voice and strong mannerisms project the anguish and the strength of this complex man who brought hope and a feeling of self-worth to people on whom society had turned its back. Alone on stage, Genauer gives a virile, immediate portrayal.

The distressing thing about the rest of us — I felt this sitting there in the darkened audience — is that it takes us so long to realize who the real heroes are in our midst and that so few of us ever find the potential existing in all of us to live lives of such spiritual dimension as they do.

Man's inhumanity to man remains the most distressing constant in human history. It has existed in epidemic proportions in every age. Yet Mother Teresa leaves a safe teaching job in a school for wealthy girls to minister to the starving and dying in the streets of Calcutta. Oscar Romero leaves his pious books to thunder from his pulpit in San Salvador that soldiers must disobey the orders of the rich to slaughter the poor. Dorothy Day brings soup and hope to the bums and winos of New York's Bowery. Mitch Snyder fights for the homeless of Washington, D.C. Let's not fool ourselves. We know where the heroes are.

On this Monday morning, even as I write, the Herald (Oct. 30, 1989, page 17) runs a story about Father Alan Syslo, a Monterey priest honored by the Monterey County A.C.L.U. with its 1989 Ralph Atkinson Award for his work with the county's AIDS patients over the last five years. "Most of the people that are affected (by AIDS) are the throwaways of society," Father Syslo says. And we know that AIDS patients are this age's lepers.

Father Damien in 1889; Father Al in 1989. The former onstage in Carmel; the latter on the highways and in the hallways of the hospitals and clinics of Monterey County. And, in the wake of a devastating earthquake, heroes and heroines all around us, known to those they help and eternally in the mind of God.

Performances of Damien continue Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 2 p.m. through Nov. 4. Reservations can be made through Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561.

Cypressaires vocalize Saturday at Sunset Theater

THE CYPRESSAIRES will stage their 34th annual show, a celebration of barbershop harmony vocals, on Saturday, Nov. 4 at Sunset Theater in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

'I used my time'

JACK LONDON'S life was amazing. Born a bastard, raised by an astrologer mother and farmer stepfather, John Griffith London threw himself into life with a vengeance. More motivated for action than education at first, he threw himself into one adventurous job after another.

He started working at 10 and was a cannery worker at 14; by 16, he had been an oyster pirate and then turned state's evidence and become a member of the San Francisco Bay Fish Patrol. The next year saw him ship out on a schooner hunting seals. When he returned, he became a hobo in order to see life from that angle. He travelled around the U.S. performing a series of bone-breaking and demeaning jobs and ended up in jail, ironically, for vagrancy. He decided that only an education would free him from this daunting string of low class jobs and even lower class people.

After a semester at Berkeley, he decided that school would take too long so he threw himself into intense personal scholarship, spending up to 20 hours a day on his self-directed studies. He focused on Darwin, Spencer, Marx, and Nietzsche. He emerged a militant socialist. When he was ready to hit the road again, he went up to the Klondike. There he found so much new material for rumination and publication that he settled in. Soon he published his first story and got $5. Within the year, he had enough stories for a collection. Then came the novels, Call of the Wild, Sea Wolf, White Fang, and with them a reputation that planted him deeply in the American Literary Tradition.

Before the age of 30 he became the highest paid and most widely read author in America. The themes were predictable but not diluted for being so. The instinct for survival, compassion for the downtrodden, the eternal struggle — these kept reappearing. He writes an autobiography of sorts, Martin Eden. Although an avowed socialist, he avoided the collectivist aspect of the movement and in "The Iron Heel" denounces fascist totalitarianism. I'm telling you this much about the subject because I think he has dropped out of public awareness. Knowing more about this remarkable man may make you want to see this show.

Taelein Thomas is GroveMont's poet-in-residence and stand-up bard. He composes and recites the tales of his tribe. His kind sat around the fire in ancient Greece telling their tribal tales. He also demonstrates why bards hold the attention of the tribe. It is the intensity of their interest in the subject that does the trick. Thomas has the delivery and, indeed, the demeanor of Jack London.

Directed by Dan Gotch, the show draws us in because of the unpretentious delivery, the lyrical flights, and the down-to-earth conclusions. Thomas moves from the podium (for readings from the novels) to the "miner's campsite" set where Jack gives us the skinny on his rise and fall. I would have changed some of the order of these movements, getting the audience more warmed up before beginning the first reading, for example, but this is a minor objection within a very good production overall.

Jack's fall is one of almost Olympian scale. At the peak of his career he and his new bride, Charmian, build a yacht and set off on a seven-year odyssey. Disease lays them and their crew low, prematurely ending the trip. The boat is sold for pennies on the dollar. Charmian then has a child that dies.

He starts to do "hack work" but is glad that he can still get in his "thousand words a day." He has recurring dreams of a skeletal death mask, "the noseless one." He builds a dream house and it is torched on the day it is completed. There is suspicion of arson. He has been drinking "John Barleycorn" again, and a doctor has also prescribed morphine for kidney pain. An accidental combination of the two kills him at age 40. Thomas conveys the stoicism of both Jack and Charmian in the face of their terrible fate. He now belongs to the ages.

"I used my time," he said. But even more, he also said that "he'd rather be ashes than dust." He got his wish.

A visit to the ruins of "Wolf House" in Glen Ellyn is a very moving experience for anyone who is interested in this American Original.
